BRITISH INSTITUTE AT ANKARA

The British Institute at Ankara supports, promotes and publishes British research focused on Turkey and the Black Sea littoral in all academic disciplines within the arts, humanities and social sciences, whilst maintaining a centre of excellence in Ankara focused on the archaeology and related subjects of Turkey.

A small staff at the Institute's premises in Ankara conduct their own research, assist scholars and maintain the centre of excellence. The centre houses a library of over 42,000 volumes, research collections of botanical, faunal, epigraphic and pottery material, together with collections of maps, photographs and fieldwork archives, and a laboratory and computer services. Access to these resources is available free of charge to members of the Institute.

The Institute is able to offer to members, for a reasonable charge, the use of accommodation, surveying and photographic equipment, and vehicles.

The Institute encourages as wide a scope of high-quality research as can be supported with its financial, practical and administrative resources. The Institute supports a small number of thematically focused research programmes, stimulated by current concerns of academic research in the UK as well as internationally; these are known as strategic research initiatives. In 2006 the following initiatives were supported: the British Academy Black Sea initiative; the climate history of Anatolia and the Black Sea; the frontiers of the Ottoman world; the settlement history of Anatolia; and the urban development of Anatolia. A diverse group of research projects, which were funded and/or facilitated by the Institute, operated within the strategic research initiatives scheme during 2006; these included the major multi-disciplinary research project at Çatalhöyük directed by Ian Hodder via the University of Cambridge, the archaeological excavation at Hellenistic Pichvnari in the Republic of Georgia directed by Michael Vickers of the Ashmolean Museum and Amiran Kakhidze of Batumi Archaeological Museum, and a study of climate, vegetation and landscape change in northern Turkey directed by Warren Eastwood of the University of Birmingham. The Institute also offers a range of grants, scholarships and fellowships to support undergraduate to post-doctoral research.

Subscription to the Institute costs £30 per annum (£15 for students and those who are unwaged). Members are entitled to copies of the Institute's journal, Anatolian Studies, and of its annual publication on current research, Anatolian Archaeology, a discount on other Institute publications, notification of conferences and lectures, and access to the library, other research resources and accommodation in Ankara.
