Departments

The Review introduces in this issue three new departments which will appear at irregular intervals in the future. In each case, we have been fortunate in finding scholars with special expertise who were willing to take responsibility for commenting on a given area on a continuing basis. These editors are located, moreover, at institutions where specific colleagues and the general milieu provide support to the editor in developing his department. Readers who have suggestions concerning any of the several departments should write directly to the appropriate departmental editor:

Legal Policy Issues in Social Science Perspective

CARL A. AUERBACH Law School or Samuel Krislov
Department of Political Science

University of Minnesota Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455

Methodological Issues in Social Science Research

HANS ZEISEL Law School, University of Chicago 1111 East 60th Street Chicago, Illinois 60637

Programs in Law and Social Sciences

H. LAWRENCE Ross Law School, University of Denver 200 West Fourteenth Avenue Denver, Colorado 80204

LAW AND SOCIETY REVIEW

A fourth department, established in the past issue, should similarly be addressed directly:

Selected Bibliography on Law and Society

JOEL B. GROSSMAN, HERBERT JACOB, OF JACK LADINSKY Program in Law and Social Science Social Science Building University of Wisconsin Madison, Wisconsin 53706

This division of labor supplements but does not replace the central editorial office of the Review, which will continue to receive manuscripts and books for review, as in the past.

-The Editors

---- Now in Paperback

Caucasians Only

The Supreme Court, the NAACP, and the Restrictive Covenant Cases

Clement E. Vose

In the years after World War I, Negroes found themselves excluded from most white neighborhoods in northern cities of the United States by the judicial enforcement of privately drawn racially restrictive covenants. By 1953, largely as a result of sustained efforts of the NAACP and its allies, five cases challenging the validity of judicial enforcement were carried to the United States Supreme Court, which declared judicial support for such covenants to be unconstitutional Caucasians Only describes the sociological and political events leading to these decisions, and appraises the practical results of the Supreme Court's rulings.

CAMPUS 1, $2.95

in cloth, $7.50

Japan's Invisible Race: Caste in Culture and Personality.

George DeVos and Hiroshi Wagatsuma

CAMPUS 2, $3.95

When writing Advertisers please mention LAW & SOCIETY REVIEW