KODAE SOSOL

A Survey of Korean Traditional Style
Popular Novels

by W. E. Skillend

Kodae Sosol is a term used by Korean literary historians to cover a great number and variety of traditional style works of Korean literature. This study excludes those which are known only in versions in classical Chinese and thereby seeks to set up a category which may be useful in western writing on Korean literary history: 'traditional style
popular novels'.

War and Peace in South-East Asia

PETER LYON

This book attempts to answer some controversial and important questions about South-East Asia and its crucial place in world politics. It is a critical analysis of such matters as the stakes for the outside powers, the interests and outlooks of the local powers, and the prospects for neutralization. 15s. net. Oxford Paperbacks (Royal Institute of International Affairs)

Indians in Malaysia and Singapore

SINAPPAH ARASARATNAM

This is a historical account of the development of the largest Indian community overseas; the central theme is the growth of political consciousness during the Second World War and the conflicting loyalties of the Indians in Malaysia, and how far they have maintained their identity as Indians in the present social structure. 2 maps paper covers 25s. net Institute of Race Relations

The Poems of Li Ho (791-817)

Translated and edited by

J. D. FRODSHAM

Li Ho was one of the most brilliant poets of the T'ang dynasty, itself the finest era of Chinese poetry. His sensibility is striking modern: he has been compared with Baudelaire, Keats, and Trakl. This first complete edition of his work reveals an unfamiliar facet of the Chinese imagination, and should be of great value to anyone seriously interested in world literature. 84s. net

Britain and Japan 1858-1883

GRACE FOX

This book deals with Anglo-Japanese relations during the crucial early years of British influence in Japan. Based on primary materials in Britain, Japanese, and American archives, it throws new light on Britain's controversial connections with the Meiji Restoration and on the economic and social changes effected with British assistance before and after that turning-point in Japanese history. 13 plates 3 maps £5 10s. net

1688 Revolution in Siam

The Memoir of Father de Bèze, S. J.

Translated by E. W. HUTCHINSON

1688 was a year of revolution in the history of both England and Siam; the kings of both countries were unseated, their pro-French policies were reversed, and a severe setback was administered to Louis XIV's aim of subverting the national religions and statehood of both countries to Catholicism and French grandeur. 19 plates 3 maps 70s. net Hong Kong University Press

The Transition in Bengal, 1756-1775

A Study of Saiyid Muhammed Reza Khan

ABDUL MAJED KHAN

The first full-scale study of Reza Khan who held the office of Naib Nazim and Naib Diwan of Bengal from 1765 to 1772. During this time he carried on a competent administration in traditional style in the face of opposition from the officers of the East India Company. This study corrects many misconceptions about the nature of the British 'take-over' in Bengal—its speed, efficiency and motivation—and clarifies a confused and controversial period of Bengal history. 85s. net

Second Edition

A Geographical Study

Prue Dempster

The preparation of this second edition has made it possible to bring up to date figures showing the rapidly changing economy of Japan. The chapters on farming, population, industry, transport and trade have been revised in the light of these figures. Many maps and diagrams have been redrawn and there is a supplementary bibliography.

Comments on the First Edition

"Its information is presented with an abundance of extremely well chosen and well produced photographs, extracts from Japanese maps and diagrams, which are carefully integrated into the reading matter." The Geographical Magazine.

"The book should be on the library shelves of all educational establishments."

MUSLIM SELF-STATEMENT IN INDIA AND PAKISTAN 1857-1963

1970. XI, 241 pages, paperbound est. DM 50,—

Much has been written about India, about the break-up of the sub-continent in a Hindu and a Muslim part, about the struggle between tradition and modernity within the Muslim community; but though the description has often been correct, the clash of convictions and mentalities, the sophistry, the hope, the despair of those who argued can be assessed only when the psychological change is envisaged through significant examples of the warring currents responsible for it. All this, the true reality to those whose history was taking shape, has in large measure been missed or lost.

Hence the decision of the authors to portray, in the reflection of a far-reaching but comparatively concise selection of representative texts, many of them, for linguistic reasons, practically inaccessible to anyone outside of India, others almost equally remote because of the manner in which they were published, the principal ideological strains, the principal emotional motivations, the principal techniques of reasoning, and the principal solutions proposed and attained that, from the point of view of the participant society, mark a century of the bitterest conflicts and contradictions leading Indian Islam from crushing defeat to the searing difficulties of independence in Pakistan and the ambiguities of minority status in India.
