The popular Research Methods in Psychiatry has been fully revised and updated to produce a comprehensive new guide. The second edition contains new chapters on writing a review paper, and research into the history of psychiatry. The chapters on statistical methods and use of computers have been expanded to incorporate new developments in these fields, and the sections on meta-analysis and rating scales have been enlarged.

The British Journal of Psychiatry is published monthly under the auspices of the Royal College of Psychiatrists. The Journal publishes original work in all fields of psychiatry. All communications, including manuscripts for publication, should be sent to The Editor, British Journal of Psychiatry, 17 Belgrave Square, London SW1X 8PG.

Full instructions to authors are given overleaf.

Instructions to Authors

The British Journal of Psychiatry is published monthly by the Royal College of Psychiatrists. The BJP publishes original work in all fields of psychiatry. All communications, including manuscripts for publication, should be sent to The Editor, The British Journal of Psychiatry, 17 Belgrave Square, London SW1X 8PG.

All articles are peer reviewed. A decision will be made on a paper within three months of its receipt.

Contributions are accepted for publication on the condition that their substance has not been published or submitted for publication elsewhere. The BJP does not hold itself responsible for statements made by contributors. Unless so stated, material in the BJP does not necessarily reflect the views of the Editor or the Royal College of Psychiatrists.

Published articles become the property of the BJP and can be published elsewhere, in full or in part, only with the Editor's written permission.

Manuscripts accepted for publication are copy-edited to improve readability and to ensure conformity with house style.

We regret that manuscripts and figures unsuitable for publication will not normally be returned.

Manuscripts

Two high-quality copies should be submitted and authors should keep one copy for reference. Articles should ideally be 3000–5000 words long, must be typed on one side of the paper only, double-spaced throughout (including tables and references) and with wide margins (at least 4 cm); all the pages, including the title page, must be numbered.

Title and authors

The title should be brief and relevant. If necessary, a subtitle may be used to amplify the main title.

One of the authors should be designated to receive correspondence and proofs, and the appropriate address indicated. This author must take responsibility for keeping all other named authors informed of the paper's progress. More than five authors may be credited to a paper only at the Editor's discretion.

If authors wish to have their work peer reviewed anonymously, they must submit their work without personal identification; names and addresses of all authors should be given in the covering letter. Otherwise, the names of the authors should appear on the title page in the form that is wished for publication, and the names, degrees, affiliations and full addresses at the time the work described in the paper was carried out given at the end of the paper.

Summaries

A structured summary should be given at the beginning of the article, incorporating the following headings: Background; Method; Results; Conclusions. These should outline the questions investigated, the design, essential findings, and main conclusion of the study. This should be up to 150 words long. Review articles do require summaries, although comments, annotations, lectures and points of view do not.

References

References should be listed alphabetically at the end of the paper, the titles of journals being given in full. Titles of books and journals are printed in italic and should therefore be underlined on the typescript. Reference lists not in BJP style will be returned to the author for correction.

Authors should check that the text references and list are in agreement as regards dates and spelling of names. The text reference should be in the form '(Smith, 1971)' or 'Smith (1971) showed that . . .'. The reference list should follow the style example below (note that et al is used after three authors have been listed for a work by four or more).
