perspective	4	Indian temple architecture and modernity: practices, knowledge production, methodologies Megha Chand Inglis and Crispin Branfoot
design	14	Re-creation and self-creation in temple design Adam Hardy understands architectural history as 're-creation', revealing design principles allowing the design of a new temple in an ancient Indian style to be 'self-creating' and to constitute 'design research'.
	30	Ephemeral by design Swati Chattopadhyay investigates the relation between ephemerality and architecture, examining design principles that inform construction of temporary pavilions for the festival of Durgapuja in Kolkata.
history	47	Sacred architectures as monuments: a study of the Kalkaji Mandir, Delhi Deborah Sutton reflects on the renewal of the Kalkaji Mandir temple complex and the buildings around it, compared with the recently constructed Ashkardhām Mandir.
	57	Living (in) the archive Megha Chand Inglis offers narrations of a domestic archival realm belonging to a family of hereditary temple practitioners in western India, highlighting that family's creative struggles with modernity and colonialism.
	75	Architectural knowledge and the 'Dravidian' temple in colonial Madras Presidency Crispin Branfoot situates culturally the study of modern Tamil temples and their builders at a time of religious revival and cultural nationalism in the 1910s in colonial South India.
practice	91	Horse and rider: who will drive change in ethics and practices of globalised conservation on living heritage sites? Oriel Prizeman examines derivations of authority for architectural conservation in the context of living heritage at two sites in India, probing the mediating potential of documentation.
