

REBELLION, REVOLUTION AND ARMED FORCE:
A Comparative Study of Fifteen Countries with Special Emphasis on Cuba and South Africa

by D. E. H. RUSSELL, Division of Social Science, Mills College, Oakland, California

This book provides a systematic study of fourteen twentieth-century rebellions, seven successful and seven unsuccessful, with special emphasis on the behavior of the establishment armed forces in each instance. In light of her detailed analysis of these fourteen rebellions, the author reevaluates prevailing theories on the nature of rebellion, and offers a fresh, penetrating analysis that will make her book indispensable to anyone interested in rebellion as a social and historical phenomena.

LAW AND ORDER IN HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

The Case of Elizabethan Essex

by JOEL B. SAMAHA, Department of History and Criminal Justice Studies, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota

Believing crime to be an outgrowth as well as a reflection of the social upheavals that took place during the Elizabethan Era, Professor Samaha has prepared an in-depth study of the Elizabethan system of criminal justice as it operated in Essex County during the last half of the sixteenth century. He shows in detail how the administration of justice worked on a day-to-day basis, describing what crimes were committed, who was prosecuted for them, who was convicted and who went free, what punishments were given for different offenses, and what standards were set up for determining legality and illegality.

THE MODERN WORLD-SYSTEM:

Capitalist Agriculture and the Origins of the European World Economy in the Sixteenth Century

by IMMANUEL WALLERSTEIN, Department of Sociology, McGill University, Montreal, Canada

Prepublication Reviews of this Outstanding Book:

"I can say without hesitation that it is the finest book of analytical history that I have read in the last ten years. That Europe had formed a world economy around herself historians knew, but only in general. What they had never thought about with the keenness and intelligence which characterizes I. Wallerstein's thought is that this entity provides a new framework for the subject of European history, that it is compelling, a new explanation, a new classification, indeed a revolutionary one, of received knowledge and current thought.

—Fernand Braudel

"The first and only serious, comprehensive and successful attempt to advance an analysis and explanation of the early development of a world economy, the understanding of which is essential for the proper appreciation of all subsequent development. This book should become a classic immediately upon publication."

—Andre Gunder Frank

Not since Barrington Moore's Social Origins of Dictatorship and Democracy has a work of history provoked such advance excitement as this first volume of a comprehensive four-volume treatise on the modern world-system. Immanuel Wallerstein has gone beyond prevailing perspectives of history, formulating a bold hypothesis about the world as a whole which promises to be something of an intellectual event. It is not just a synthesis of historical and sociological writings, but a new interpretive framework for both the political and economic origins of capitalism.

WORKERS IN THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION: Recent Studies of Labor in the United States and Europe

Edited by Peter N. Stearns and Daniel J. Walkowitz

Research into the history of the working class is of prime value as historians and other social scientists seek to understand the impact of change on large numbers of people. These essays stress new imaginative approaches which deal not just with conventional labor history but with the foundations of labor—the workers themselves. The coordinating theme is the diversity of working-class experience and the reaction of ordinary workers to an industrial setting. Various types of protest and adaptation are analyzed among artisans, factory workers and diverse ethnic groups. The collection provides an unusual and significant comparative perspective with American, British, French and German studies.

PAST & PRESENT

a journal of historical studies

Past and Present began publication in 1952. It now appears in February, May, August and November. It aims to publish a wide variety of scholarly and original historical articles primarily concerned with social, economic and cultural changes, and their causes and consequences. The Journal is designed to reach an audience that includes both specialists and non-specialists; to communicate the results of historical research in readable and lively form; to provide a forum for debate in which historians and scholars in allied subjects take part and to encourage the examination of particular problems and periods for the light they throw on wider issues of historical change.

Copies of all back numbers are immediately available. Classified Tables of Contents 1952-73 are available free on request.

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalisations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.

Contributors will receive 50 offprints bound in the journal covers. Any additional offprints must be ordered on receipt of the first proof.
