Memorial Museum

Richard D. Breitman,
Editor-in-Chief
American University

Holocaust and Genocide Studies is the premier international forum for scholarship on the Holocaust and other genocides. It features research articles, interpretive essays, and book reviews in all the social-scientific and humanitarian disciplines.

Articles compel readers to confront many aspects of human behavior, to contemplate major moral issues, to consider the application of science and technology in human affairs, and to reconsider important features of political and social organization. Each number features an extensive bibliography of recent works on the Holocaust, other genocides, and crimes against humanity; the final number each year includes an updated list of major research centers specializing in Holocaust studies.
