

Deil S. Wright has been appointed as the Carl Hatch Visiting Professor of Public Administration at the University of New Mexico.

Award Recipients

Editor's Note: For a listing of National Science Foundation awards to political scientists in FY 1986, see "News of the Profession" in this issue of PS.

Eugene V. Debs Foundation

The Debs Foundation has awarded its Bryant Spann Memorial Prize for 1986 to Richard A. Cloward and Frances Fox Piven for their two-part article on registration strategy, "Trying to Break Down the Barriers" and "How to Get Out the Vote in 1988," published in The Nation on November 2 and November 23, 1985, respectively. The prize recognizes "published work which evidences social vision and commitment to social justice."

Fulbright Distinguished Fellows

To celebrate its 40th anniversary, the Fulbright Exchange Program has selected 40 American scholars and 40 foreign scholars as Distinguished Fellows. Following are the political scientists from the U.S. with their current affiliation, lecture topic, and country of visitation.

John Brademas, president, New York University. International Education and the Future of Education in the United States; Greece.

Robert A. Dahl, Sterling Professor of Political Science, Department of Political Science, Yale University. American Government and Democratic Institutions; Venezuela.

Theodore J. Lowi, John L. Senior Professor of American Institutions, Department of Political Science, Cornell University. American Democracy and Government; Ecuador.

Norman J. Ornstein, Resident Scholar, American Enterprise Institute. American Constitutionalism; Hong Kong, Malaysia, Philippines, and Taiwan.

Ellis Sandoz, professor, Department of Political Science, Louisiana State University. American Government and the U.S. Constitution; Italy.

Robert Scalapino, Director, Institute of East Asian Studies, University of California, Berkeley. U.S. Foreign Policy; Korea.

Myron Weiner, Ford International Professor of Political Science, Department of Political Science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Politics and Development; Sri Lanka.

Fulbright Scholar Program

The political scientists listed below are among 1,000 academics who have received awards under the Fulbright Scholar Program to travel, lecture, consult, and conduct advanced research abroad in 1986-87. The scholars are listed with their home institutions and the country they will visit.

Nicholas O. Berry, professor of political science, Ursinus College: New Zealand.

Laurie A. Brand, assistant editor of the Journal of Palestine Studies, Institute for Palestine Studies (Washington): multi-country award.

Paul G. Buchanan, adjunct professor of national security affairs, Naval Postgraduate School: multi-country award.

Didrick A. Castberg, professor of political science, University of Hawaii: Japan.

Harlan Cleveland, dean of public affairs and planning in the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Minnesota: New Zealand.

Ellen T. Comisso, associate professor of political science, University of California at San Diego: Yugoslavia.

Donald K. Crone, assistant professor of international relations, Michigan State University: multi-country award.

Carlos A. Cunha, adjunct lecturer in social sciences, University of Michigan: Haiti.

Robert S. Cutler, senior staff associate on the evaluation staff, National Science Foundation: Japan.

John J. Damis, professor of political science, Portland State University: Morocco.

Karen E. Feste, associate professor of international studies, University of Denver: Austria.

Michael H. Fleet, associate professor of political science, Marquette University: Chile.

Judith A. Gentleman, assistant professor of political science, State University of New York College at Geneseo: Mexico.

Harold Guetzkow, professor emeritus of political science, Northwestern University: Nigeria.

Lowell S. Gustafson, lecturer in government and foreign affairs, University of Virginia: Argentina.

Jeffrey Hahn, professor of political science, Villanova University: U.S.S.R.

Susan B. Hansen, associate professor of political science, University of Pittsburgh: United Kingdom.

Elizabeth C. Hanson, associate professor of political science, University of Connecticut: India.

Kenneth M. Holland, assistant professor of political science, University of Vermont: Japan.

William D. Jackson, professor of political science, Miami University (Ohio): Australia.

Ralph T. Jans, professor of social science, University of Maine at Machias: Thailand.

Willard R. Johnson, professor of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology: Ivory Coast.

Miles E. Kahler, associate professor of international relations and Pacific studies, University of California at San Diego: Yugoslavia.

Jemedari Kamara, director of African and Afro-American studies, University of Michigan at Flint: Benin.

Robert R. Kaufman, professor of political science, Rutgers University: Yugoslavia.

Noel J. Kent, assistant professor of political science, University of Hawaii: Denmark.

Norman Kogan, professor of political science, University of Connecticut: Italy.

Edward A. Kolodziej, professor of political science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign: multi-country award.

Bruce R. Kuniholm, associate professor of policy science and public affairs, Duke University: Turkey.

Jacob W. Landynski, professor of political science, New School for Social Research: Israel.

Ronald Linden, director of the Center for Russian and East European Studies, University of Pittsburgh: Yugoslavia.

Arthur Maass, professor of arts and sciences, Harvard University: Mexico.

Dean E. McHenry, Jr., associate professor of government, Claremont Graduate School: Tanzania.

Peter H. Merkl, professor of political science, University of California at Santa Barbara: Turkey.

Tommie S. Montgomery, assistant professor of political science, Dickinson College: Argentina.

Benjamin N. Muego, assistant professor of natural and social sciences, Bowling Green State University: Philippines.

People in Political Science

Jack H. Nagel, associate professor of political science, University of Pennsylvania: New Zealand.

David D. Newson, associate dean of the school of foreign service, Georgetown University: United Kingdom.

Bruce J. Perlman, assistant professor of public administration, University of New Mexico: Honduras.

Harry J. Psomiades, professor of political science, Queens College of City University of New York: Greece.

Donald R. Ranish, professor of political science, Antelope Valley College: South Korea.

James N. Rosenau, professor of international relations, University of Southern California: Yugoslavia.

Gordon C. Schloming, associate professor of psychology and social sciences, University of Portland: Peru.

Mitchell A. Seligson, director of the Center for Latin American Studies, University of Pittsburgh: Costa Rica.

Glen W. Sparrow, associate professor of public administration and urban studies, San Diego State University: Hong Kong.

Richard G. Stevens, associate dean, Defense Intelligence College (Washington): Hong Kong.

Luis Valdes, associate professor of politics, Rollins College: Dominican Republic.

Richard W. Wilson, professor of political science, Rutgers University: South Korea.

Robert G. Wirsing, professor of government and international studies, University of South Carolina: Pakistan.

Amos Yoder, professor of political science, University of Idaho: China.

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

The Johnson fund has named six fellows in health care finance for 1986-87. Fellowships support a year of advanced training and field experience and include stipends equal to the annual salary of a recipient, up to $40,000. The fellows also receive grants of up to $15,000 to support a research project to be conducted during the year following their fellowship term.

The following political scientists are among the fellows:

Charles J. Barrilleaux, assistant professor, political science department, University of New Orleans.

Samuel T. Bookheimer, assistant professor, political science department, University of Houston.

David C. Colby, visiting associate professor, policy sciences program, University of Maryland at Baltimore County.

National Academy of Public Administration

Naomi B. Lynn, Georgia State University, and Patricia S. Florestano, University of Maryland, have been elected to membership in the National Academy of Public Administration.

Public Administration Research Award

Charles H. Levine, Senior Specialist in American Government and Public Administration at the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, has been selected for the first Distinguished Research Award presented by the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration and the American Society for Public Administration. This award was created to recognize outstanding research that is having a significant impact on the way we understand and think about public administration. Levine was selected for his work on managing public agencies under conditions of cutbacks and retrenchment.

Levine's work has also been recognized by the Senior Executives Association, an organization composed of members of the federal government's Senior Executive Service. In a recent competition it selected Levine's essay, "The Federal Government in the Year 2000: Administrative Legacies of the Reagan Years," as the best paper on the topic of the "Federal Career Service for the 1990's."

Southern Political Science Association

Thomas M. Konda, State University of New York-Plattsburgh, and Lee Sigelman, University of Kentucky, received the Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper presented at the 1985 annual meeting of the Southern Political Science Association, "Public Evaluations of the American Parties, 1952-1984."

Beverly Cook, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, was awarded the prize for the best paper on women and politics presented at the 1985 meeting for "A Cross-National Comparison of the Access of Women to Courthouses."

Alissa Worden, Michigan State University, won the Brooks/Cole Award for the best paper presented by a graduate student at the 1985 meeting for "Trial Judges' Responsiveness to Political Climate: Some Preliminary Findings," written while she was a graduate student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

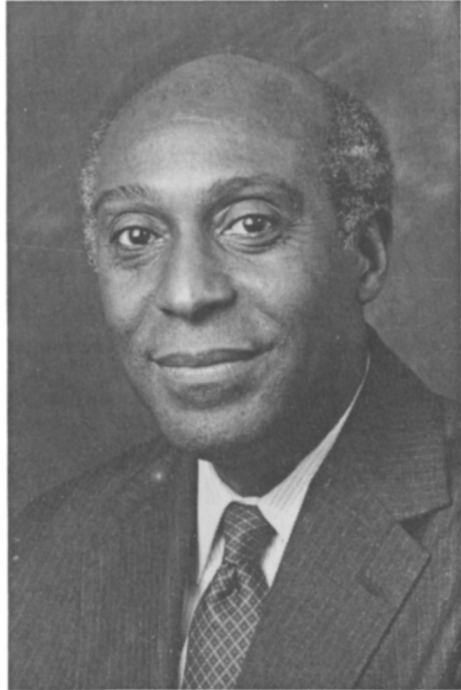

Other Awards and Honors

James Eisenstein, professor of political science, Pennsylvania State University, has received a 1986 AMOCO Foundation Outstanding Teaching Award.

Marianne Githens, department of politics and public policy, Goucher College, has received an Outstanding Teacher Award.

Charles V. Hamilton, Wallace S. Sayre Professor of Government, has received a Great Teacher Award, presented by the Society of Columbia Graduates, in its 38th annual award program. Hamilton was honored by the students of Columbia College in 1982 with the Mark Van Doren Award.

Frank L. Klingberg, emeritus professor of political science, Southern Illinois University, has been honored by a $10,000 endowment from Youth World Inc., to establish the Frank L. Klingberg "Youth World" Scholarship for political science students at Southern Illinois University.

Charles V. Hamilton has received a Great Teacher Award, presented by the Society of Columbia Graduates. (Photo by Joe Pineiro)

Theodore Lowi, John L. Senior Professor of American Institutions at Cornell University, has been appointed 1986-87 Caroline Werner Gannett Professor at Rochester Institute of Technology.

John D. Martz III, professor of political science, Pennsylvania State University, has been selected to receive the 1986 Faculty Scholar Medal for Outstanding Achievement in the area of the social and behavioral sciences.

Elston Roady, professor emeritus, Florida State University, has received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Illinois State University Alumni Association.

Larry D. Spence, associate professor of political science, Pennsylvania State University, has been named a recipient of the Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching. He has also been the recipient of an Outstanding Adviser Award from the College of Liberal Arts Alumni Society.

Frank L. Klingberg has been honored by the establishment of the Frank L. Klingberg "Youth World" Scholarship for political science students at Southern Illinois University.

In Memoriam

John Patrick Hagan

As one of Pat's former colleagues put it, "I never dreamed Pat Hagan would be in a situation he couldn't talk himself out of." Tragically, John Patrick Hagan died October 10, 1986, 16 days short of his 32nd birthday, as a result of injuries suffered in an auto accident. Pat was a visiting assistant professor at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, on leave from West Virginia University.

These two institutions had been his academic homes. Pat was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of WVU (1976) and received his J.D. from WVU in 1979. He then served for a year as a law clerk for the Hon. Darrell V. McGraw, Jr. of the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals before proceeding to Chapel Hill where he earned his M.A. (1982) and Ph.D.

(1986). His dissertation, "Policy Cycles and Conflict in State Supreme Courts: A Political Model of Judicial Activism," was an innovative study of activism on four state supreme courts. While completing this work, he joined the faculty at WVU, first as a visiting assistant professor in 1983 and then on a tenure-track line in 1984.

Pat immediately gained a reputation as an outstanding instructor. Students flocked from around the campus to sign up for his "Con Law," "Civil Liberties," "Judicial Politics," and "Law and the Legal System" classes. Consistently five minutes late for class, Pat would enter lecturing and waving his arms. More than one student has discovered at the end of a Pat Hagan lecture that s/he had been so enthralled that s/he had forgotten to take any notes. His freedom of speech lectures, replete with examples, were already legendary.

Pat had also begun to publish his work in professional journals. Issues of Policy Studies Journal and West Virginia Law Review carry articles by him, and he had three manuscripts under review at the time of his death. And, as we never let Pat forget, he was the only political scientist we knew who had published in the Journal of Pediatric Dentistry.

As Pat's brother noted at his funeral, Pat would have wanted all of his friends and family to "get on with our lives." He would not have wanted us to spend too much time mourning; or if we felt the need to mourn, Pat would have preferred it be done in the proper convivial setting. Still, as we have talked to the many people who knew Pat, it is clear that he touched many lives.

The stories are legion. Simply put, Pat was fun to be around. Conversations with him could, and often did, easily move from the merits of Buckaroo Bonzai movies (and Pat saw more than most people do) to the likely impact of the appointment of Scalia to the Supreme Court; from the latest Supreme Court obscenity decision to value of the biopolitics approach within the discipline.

Pat Hagan was, in every sense, a good person. He was honest and trustworthy. He was a person one could proudly call a