

---

list of contributors

Axel Christoffersen was Director of NTNU University Museum from 2001 to 2013. His research interests are Viking Age and early medieval urban development in Scandinavia, handicraft production and exchange, state formation processes, cultural landscapes and social spaces, within which fields he has published extensively. In recent years he has also been engaged in heritage in conflict, materiality and cultural-memory studies, and has carried out projects focusing on the use of photography as a tool for heritage awareness building in Afghanistan, Tibet, China and Myanmar.

Jeffrey Fleisher (BA, MA, Ph.D., University of Virginia) is an Associate Professor in the Department of Anthropology at Rice University in Houston, Texas. He has conducted archaeological research in Africa, North America and the Middle East. His regional speciality is the ancient Swahili coast of eastern Africa, focusing on the development of first- and second-millennium urban centres there. Past research has focused on the ancient settlements of rural and non-elite Swahili, and their connections and contributions to urban development. Currently, he directs a long-term project at the UNESCO World Heritage Site of Songo Mnara in southern Tanzania, focusing on the use of open and public space.

Sven Kalmring is a Researcher at the Centre for Baltic and Scandinavian Archaeology, and since 2011 has been Guest Researcher at the Archaeological Research Laboratory at Stockholm University. Previously he worked in the High-Tech in Hedeby project at the Archäologisches Landesmuseum of the Stiftung Schleswig-Holsteinische Landesmuseen Schloss Gottorf, and wrote his Ph.D. thesis on the harbour of Hedeby. His research interests are maritime archaeology, early medieval harbours, trade and exchange in the Viking Age and urbanization in northern Europe. He has published on such sites as Hedeby, Schleswig, Birka and Dorestad, and excavated in Hedeby and Birka, as well as in Iceland.

Leo S. Klejn was born in Vtebsk in 1927 and studied philology and archaeology at Leningrad University, under Vladimir Proppe and Mikhail Aratmonov. A lifelong critic of orthodox archaeological opinions in the Soviet Union, Klejn was made to suffer for his independence when he was imprisoned on trumped-up charges in 1981. Since the fall of the Soviet Union in 1991 Klejn has been able to express himself with greater freedom and is enjoying a very productive retirement. Klejn has written not only on archaeology but also on the composition of the Iliad and on pagan Slavic religion. However, his main discipline is archaeology. He has written on the history of archaeology and on the origins of Indo-European-speakers; in theoretical archaeology he has written about typology, ethnogenesis, the relation between archaeology and history, and the nature of theory itself.

Stephen Leach is Senior Research Assistant in Philosophy at Keele University and has interests in both theoretical archaeology and the philosophy of history. He is the author of The foundations of history. Collingwood's analysis of historical explanation (2009) and co-editor (with James Connelly and Peter Johnson) of R.G. Collingwood. A research companion (2014). He is also the author of a recent book on Klejn's life and work, A Russian perspective on theoretical archaeology. The life and Work of Leo S. Klejn (with a foreword by Stephen Shennan) (2015).

Torill Christine Lindstrøm is Professor at the Department of Psychosocial Science, University of Bergen, Bergen, Norway. She has a Ph.D. in biological and medical psychology, and is a member of the European Association of Archaeologists (EAA) and of the International Association of Classical Archaeology (AIAC). The topics of Lindstrøm's psychological publications range from ghosts to immunoglobulins. Lindstrøm's archaeological publications and research are on various topics and from several periods, with an emphasis on animals in archaeology (in art, in transformation phenomena, in Roman arenas), and on Roman archaeology (facial expressions, painting, Dionysianism). She uses transdisciplinary approaches, and applies psychological perspectives to archaeological themes. She has a profound interest in theory and philosophy of science.

Ulrich Müller is Professor and Chair of Early Historical, Medieval and Post-medieval Archaeology at the Institute for Pre- and Protohistoric Archaeology, University of Kiel, with a focus on medieval and early modern times. His work includes several studies on medieval urbanity, craft and trade, and social-practice theory. He is an editor of Zeitschrift für Archäologie des Mittelalters and has published works on networks and centrality in medieval Europe.

Johan Normark is a Researcher at the Department of Historical Studies at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden. Geographically his focus is the Coahuila region in southern Mexico, from the Middle Formative to the Caste War. Thematically his focus is on ontological aspects of the archaeological record. Recent research projects have focused on Maya causeways, climate change and settlement change around caves, water as an archaeological object, the 2012 phenomenon, early Maya-Spanish encounters in Yucatan, and multiscalar relations between time and objects.

Bjørnar Olsen is Professor in Archaeology at the Department of Archaeology and Social Anthropology, University of Tromsø, Norway. His research interests include contemporary archaeology, memory, thing theory and Sámi studies. Among his latest books are In defense of things. Archaeology and the ontology of objects (2010), and Ruin memories. Materialities, aesthetics and the archaeology of the recent past (2014, editor with Þóra Pétursdóttir).

Monica L. Smith is an archaeologist of complex societies with a particular focus on urbanism and daily life in the past. She is the author of A prehistory of ordinary people (2010) and editor of The social construction of ancient cities (2003). Along with her colleague Rabindra Kumar Mohanty she has been codirecting excavations in India at the ancient city of Sisupalgarh and the nearby town of Talapada.

LuAnn Wandsnider is Professor and Chair in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln. Her current research focuses on the role of material culture in community formation in the Hellenistic and Roman eastern Mediterranean and the historic Great Plains of North America.

Christopher Witmore is Associate Professor of Archaeology and Classics in the Department of Classics & Modern Languages & Literatures at Texas Tech University, USA. His research interests include Mediterranean archaeology, especially Greece, things, landscape and chorography, and the science studies of archaeology. He is co-author of Archaeology. The discipline of things (2012, with B. Olsen, M. Shanks and T. Webmoor) and co-editor of Archaeology in the making (2013, with W. Rathje and M. Shanks).

Guidelines for contributors

Archaeological dialogues is a broad, peer-reviewed journal for debating archaeology. Articles should be accessible to an audience which may be unfamiliar with the specific period and region discussed. Transparent writing is encouraged above abstruse reasoning. Jargon should be avoided and succinct writing is appreciated. We value good illustrations. These can include photographs, line-drawings and maps.

Procedure

The Archaeological dialogues publishing process includes the following steps: submission, evaluation, decision (acceptance, modification or rejection), copy-editing, proof-reading, publication, and distribution. In order to guarantee efficient and quality publication contributors are requested to adhere closely to the following guidelines:

- All manuscripts should be written in English. Manuscripts that seriously fail to conform to the guidelines will be returned to authors for revision before they will be considered.
- When submitting a contribution to Archaeological dialogues, it will be acknowledged on receipt. One of the editors will be the contact person for a paper throughout the entire process. If scope, quality and language are appropriate it will be sent to two anonymous referees for expert opinion. Usually within two or three months, the editors will inform you of their final decision. In the case of rejection, an editorial justification will be provided, including the original referees' reports. In the case of acceptance – which may be conditional on revisions – one of the editors will guide you through the rest of the publishing process. Before an article goes into print, authors will receive a copy of the proofs to check. The entire procedure between submission and appearance should take less than a year.

Types of contributions

Archaeological dialogues publishes two main types of article: ‘discussion articles’ and ‘articles.’ The former are accompanied by published comments and a reply. Discussion articles are usually longer, up to 8–9000 words, whereas articles are typically around 4–7000 words. Discussion papers usually take longer to appear in print because of the time required for comments and reply. In addition, the journal publishes ‘provocations’ and ‘reactions’. These are short pieces normally less than 2000 words which take a novel or provocative stance on a particular topic, likely to initiate a lively dialogue, or which respond to an article previously published in Archaeological dialogues. Provocations and Reactions can be more essay-like in style. They are not subject to full peer review but are reviewed by the editorial board. Review essays and interviews are usually solicited by the editorial board, but scholars with suggestions in this direction are encouraged to contact us.

Submission of contributions

Manuscripts are preferably received by email (dialogues@cambridge.org). Alternatively, a CD and hardcopy may be sent to: Archaeological Dialogues, c/o Jeremias Pelgrom, Koninklijk Nederlands Instituut Rome, Via Omero 10/12, 00197 ROMA, ITALY.

Authors are solely responsible not only for the contents of their manuscripts, but also for securing any legal rights or permissions to publish submitted material, including copyright-protected materials. The appropriate acknowledgements should be given in captions, endnotes, or elsewhere. Manuscripts should not be submitted to (nor should they have been published in) any other journal or publication.

See <http://uk.cambridge.org/journals/ard> for an extended version of the guidelines for contributors.

This journal issue has been printed on FSC-certified paper and cover board. FSC is an independent, non-governmental, not-for-profit organization established to promote the responsible management of the world’s forests. Please see www.fsc.org for information.

Archaeological Dialogues is indexed in the Thomson Reuters Arts and Humanities Citation Index.

Archaeological dialogues

discussion article

- 109 Performing towns. Steps towards an understanding of medieval urban communities as social practice Axel Christophersen
- 132 On critical approaches, unintended consequences and the data of everyday life in ‘performing towns’ Jeffrey Fleisher
- 137 Urbanity by its ‘smallest units’. Comments on ‘performing towns’ Sven Kalring
- 141 Steps towards understanding medieval urban communities as social practice Ulrich Müller
- 146 Towns and cities. A commentary on ‘performing towns’ Monica L. Smith
- 149 On complementarity of practice, scale and structure. Scalar aspects of social/material space in Anatolian peri-urban contexts in antiquity LuAnn Wandsnider
- 157 Urbanity as social practice Axel Christophersen

interview

- 171 In conversation with Leo S. Klejn Stephen Leach

provocation

- 187 Archaeology, symmetry and the ontology of things. A response to critics Bjørnar Olsen and Christopher Witmore

reaction

- 199 Going against the flow. Reaction to Veronica Strang Johan Normark

article

- 207 Agency ‘in itself’. A discussion of inanimate, animal and human agency Torill Christine Lindstrøm

- 239 List of contributors

Cambridge Journals Online

For further information about this journal please go to the journal website at:
journals.cambridge.org/ard

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS