The History of Goucher College, 1930–1985

Frederic O. Musser

When Goucher College was founded in Baltimore in 1885, its mission was to provide quality education for women. Goucher would pursue that mission for the next century. In this sequel to an earlier history that chronicled the college's first fifty years, Frederic O. Musser tells the story of Goucher's second half-century.

Drawing on the college archives as well as on extensive interviews with faculty, alumnae, and staff, Musser offers a thorough overview of Goucher's history since 1930 and a look at the changes those years have brought to Goucher's administration, curriculum, campus, and students. The history ends with Goucher's decision to become coeducational.

The Growth of English Education 1348-1648

A Social and Cultural History
Michael Van Cleave Alexander

"Education is prime news nowadays, and a subject of vast and growing importance for all democracies. Professor Alexander's book gives us the origins of our own English-speaking tradition, which has served us so well. Though it goes right back to the Middle Ages and on to the Elizabethan Age, then the crisis of the English Civil War, it set the patterns for later developments. Professor Alexander covers all this with a wealth of reliable scholarship [and] gives us all the information we need to follow the evolution of school, college and university, in a book that is both comprehensive and readable." —A.L. Rowse
