ANNOTATED CATALOGUE OF THE PAPERS OF CHARLES S. PEIRCE

by Richard S. Robin

In his Annotated Catalogue, Richard S. Robin has collated the three sets of Peirce papers, along with miscellaneous items, arranged the material in sequential order, and provided descriptive commentary. The material is presented in two parts—the first containing the manuscripts and related materials and the second, the correspondence of Peirce and members of his family. A chronological listing of the Peirce manuscripts, a cross-reference index to Burk's and Fisch's bibliographical entries, and a cross-reference index to McMahon's earlier "Catalogue" are included in the appendices.

Identity and Spatio-Temporal Continuity

DAVID WIGGINS

The author examines the notion of spatio-temporal continuity for its own sake, dwelling first on the purely formal requirements to be satisfied by any identity-criterion and then on their effective satisfaction by our conception of the continuity of a material body of any given sort.

Wittgenstein und der Wiener Kreis

Conversations recorded by F. Waismann

Edited by B. F. McGUINNESS

In these conversations, Wittgenstein expounds views similar to those contained in Philosophische Bemerkungen, defends some of the doctrines of the Tractatus while criticising others, and occasionally reacts to questions and objections of his interlocutors. They were recorded in shorthand, and have been transcribed for the present edition in German.

Letters from Ludwig Wittgenstein

with a Memoir

PAUL ENGELMANN

Translated by L. FURTMÜLLER

There are about 50 letters of Wittgenstein (in German with English translation) together with Engelmann's Memoir. An architect by profession, Engelmann was no philosopher but was intensely interested in cultural and (in a wide sense) religious questions: it is from this side that his Memoir illuminates Wittgenstein's work.

Religion and Understanding

Edited by D. Z. PHILLIPS

The collection, despite the philosophical difference among the contributors, questions the assumption that there is one all-embracing concept of reality or intelligibility to which religion must conform.
