

Law & Society Review Condensed Style Sheet

Type manuscripts double-spaced on one side of the paper only. While manuscripts need not conform to this style sheet at the time of submission, all manuscripts must include an abstract, footnotes, and a list of references, and all accepted manuscripts must be revised by the authors to conform to the Review's style. The rules listed below supplement the manuscript information on the inside front cover of the Review. Authors are urged to consult Review issues in volume 26 or later for further illustrations. A detailed style sheet is available from the Editorial Office.

- 1. Abstracts. All manuscripts should include an abstract of not more than 100 words. No abstracts are required for review essays or comments.
- 2. Footnotes. Footnotes should be numbered sequentially (except for the author's footnote) and printed on pages immediately following the text (not at the foot of the page). They should contain only substantive comments and additional references not immediately relevant to the text.
- 3. Tables and Figures. Tables should approximate the appearance of printed tables. Figures should be camera ready; provide originals, not xerographic copies. Tables and/or figures should be placed at the end of the text, after footnotes, appendixes, and references. Their location within the text should be indicated as follows:

Table 1 about here

---

- 4. Citations. All notes that consist merely of supporting citations should be placed in parentheses in the text. For example:

In a thoughtful essay, Hayden (1991) . . .

OR

Media stories often portray the civil jury as generous (Daniels & Martin 1986:236; Hans 1989: Huber 1988).

The same general rules apply to footnote text.

- 5. References. References are placed at the end of the manuscript following the footnotes. The list should contain only those sources actually cited in text or notes. Give authors' names as they appear in the original source. For more than one publication by the same author, list them in chronological order, with the older item first. For more than one publication in one year by the same author, use small (lower-case) letters to distinguish them (e.g., 1970a, 1970b).

BOOKS: Last Name, First Name (year) Title of Book. City: Publisher.

Example: Lerner, Melvin J. (1980) Belief in a Just World. New York: Plenum.

CHAPTER IN EDITED VOLUME:

Example: Glazer, Nathan (1979) "The Judiciary and Social Policy," in L. Theberge, ed., The Judiciary in a Democratic Society. Lexington, MA: Lexington Books.

ARTICLES: Last Name, First Name (Year) "Title of Article," volume number Journal page numbers of article. (Give month or issue number if each issue is separately paginated.)

Examples: Padgett, John F. (1990) "Plea Bargaining in Prohibition," 24 Law & Society Rev. 413-50.

Brill, Steven, & James Lyons ((1986) "The Not-So-Simple Crisis," American Lawyer 12-15 (May).

UNPUBLISHED PAPERS:

Example: Lofquist, William S. (1991) "The Development of Organizational Probation." Presented at American Society of Criminology annual meeting, San Francisco.

All cases cited in text are listed under "Cases Cited" following the References. All statutes cited are listed under "Statutes Cited." For style for cases and statutes, see A Uniform System of Citation.

Identity and the Case for Gay Rights

Race, Gender, Religion as Analogies

David A. J. Richards

"David Richards proposes a bold new benchmark against which to judge structures of social hierarchy: the concept of 'moral slavery.' In a richly historical analysis, he argues that racist, sexist, and anti-gay laws share a common function—the degradation of human identity and the denial of rights of conscience—that he summarizes as 'moral slavery,' and therefore stand equally condemned by our most fundamental constitutional values. Particularly intriguing is his examination of how sexualization performs the work of dehumanization, whether the target is women or racial or sexual minorities."

Beyond the Neoliberal Peace: From Conflict Resolution to Social Reconciliation

Ronnie D. Lipschutz and Susanne Jonas (eds.)

During the 1990s, the conventional approach to peacemaking in most of the countries torn by internal conflict and violence has been for powerful countries to establish a cease-fire between warring parties, followed by imposition of the dominant model of markets and electoral politics. This "neoliberal" approach is designed to put in place the institutional forms of a peaceful society without seriously considering questions of social justice. Despite their skepticism, the articles presented here also reflect a shared desire to examine carefully the possibilities that peace processes can lead to social reconciliation as a solution and an alternative to organized violence within societies. It is this tension between skepticism about existing realities and the goal and vision of social reconciliation on the basis of social justice that unites the articles in this volume.

Larry Mungin spent his life preparing to succeed in the white world. He looked away from racial inequality and hostility, believing that he'd succeed if he played by the rules. He rose from a Queens housing project to Harvard College and Law School and went on to corporate law. But instead of becoming a partner at his mostly white firm, Mungin became the plaintiff in a racial discrimination suit that would rock the legal world and turn his life into a struggle for survival.

"Law schools can learn important lessons from this insightful book...Barrett's story has all the makings of an effective case study."—Harvard Law Review.

"Will rivet anyone wondering why the struggle to racially integrate Corporate America has made such scant progress."—Washington Post.

"With unusual empathy and evenhandedness, Barrett illuminates the complicated workings of race in a middle-class, post-Civil Rights society...an absorbing courtroom yarn."—Nicholas Lemann, author of The Promised Land.

Colonizing Hawai'i

The Cultural Power of Law

Sally Engle Merry

How does law transform family, sexuality, and community in the fractured social world characteristic of the colonizing process? In Colonizing Hawai'i, Sally Engle Merry examines a century of court records from a small town to illuminate striking changes in everyday social life, demonstrating the power of law to articulate a new cultural order on the fragments of the old.

This book is a groundbreaking analysis. As a study of transnational law and the changes it wrought in a local community, it offers insights into globalizations past with implications for globalizations present and future.

Journal of Law and Society

Edited by Philip A. Thomas

An appreciation of the operation of law within society demands a critical awareness of the social forces that shape and are shaped by law. The Journal of Law and Society unravels the complexities of law and lays out the theory underpinning social change through law. The journal is committed to publishing challenging ideas and empirically based analysis for its international readership.

Constructing a Feminist Jurisprudence
Judith A. Baer

---

According to Judith Baer, feminist legal scholarship today does not effectively address the harsh realities of women’s lives. The traditional feminist approach has led to endless debates about such abstract matters as character differences between men and women, and has failed to deal sufficiently with concrete problems with the legal system. Feminists have marginalized themselves, she argues, by withdrawing from mainstream intellectual discourse. In Our Lives Before the Law, Baer presents the framework for a new feminist jurisprudence—one that would return feminism to relevance.

Powerfully and passionately written, Our Lives Before the Law will have a major impact on the future course of feminist legal scholarship.
