PREHISTORIC MALTA. The Tarxien Temples. By Sir THEMISTOCLES ZAMMIT. Med. 8vo, fully illustrated. 12s. 6d. net.

'So little is known about the Maltese Islands and their archaeological treasures that even the most competent authors, in dealing with early Mediterranean culture, either leave Malta severely alone in their learned accounts, or else mention it with such great reserve that the reader is left with the impression that it is hardly worth discussing at all. I should like to make it more generally known that Malta was an important factor in the early Mediterranean culture, and, as it was my good fortune to excavate one of the most interesting megalithic ruins in these islands, I thought it would be of general interest to give as short a description as possible of the site and of the objects obtained there.'—From the Preface.

EXCAVATIONS AT OLYNTHUS. Part 1. The Neolithic Settlement. By GEORGE E. MYLONAS. (Studies in Archaeology, No. 6: Edited by DAVID M. ROBINSON. 4to, with 2 plates in colour and 95 illustrations (8 in colour) and 4 charts in the text. 34s. net.

For Johns Hopkins University Press.

'This monograph is the first complete account of relics discovered in a Macedonian Neolithic site, and, as many of the finds are unique among the known Greek neolithic remains, great pains have been taken to give as exhaustive a description as it was possible.'

EXCAVATIONS AT OLYNTHUS. Part 2. Architecture and Sculpture: Houses and other Buildings. By D. M. ROBINSON. (Studies in Archaeology, No. 9: Edited by D. M. ROBINSON.) 4to, 237 plates (3 in colour). 90s. net.

For Johns Hopkins University Press.

CLAY FIGURINES OF BABYLONIA AND ASSYRIA. By E. DOUGLAS VAN BUREN. (Yale Oriental Series: Researches, Vol. XVI.) Crown 4to, 68 plates. 27s. net.

For Yale University Press.

'The terracotta figurines found in Mesopotamia do not, as a rule, reach a very high level of artistic merit, although there are notable exceptions.' In this study the area has been strictly limited to Babylonia and Assyria, thus excluding the abundant material from Hittite territory and from the numerous sites in Syria which have been excavated.

THE ROMANCE OF ARCHAEOLOGY

by
DR. R. V. D. MAGOFFIN

A world-wide survey of archaeological discoveries including the most recent. It is presented in a most fascinating way, for the authors have instilled into these pages something of the real excitement that is to be found in digging up evidences of past civilizations which may at any time make necessary the rewriting of the story of mankind.

The remains of the original peoples of America have been specially fully dealt with.
