Correction

In the Winter 1971 issue of PS, under promotions, William J. Harkins was incorrectly listed as associate professor. PS is making the following correction: William J. Harkins, University of South Alabama: professor.

Late Notice

Annual Meeting—Child Care Service

The Association is exploring the possibility of a child care service at the 1971 Annual Meeting in Chicago. If you are interested in such a service, write to the Executive Director as soon as possible.

Information on the number and ages of children should be included.

In Memoriam

O. Douglas Weeks, Professor Emeritus of The University of Texas at Austin, died at the age of 74 on October 30, 1970. Born in Marion, Ohio he obtained the B.A. degree from Ohio Wesleyan and the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin, the latter in 1924. Except for one year at Western Reserve University and service with the U.S. Army University Faculty in 1945-46, he had been, until his retirement in 1966, on the faculty of the Department of Government of the University of Texas since 1924. He became a professor in 1933 and was chairman of his department from 1930-31, 1935-47, 1950-1957.

Weeks' special fields of teaching and research were Political Parties and Legislatures. For many years, however, he also taught courses in Ancient and Medieval Political Theory, and Modern Political Theory. He also had a strong interest in state and local government, and served in many consultative roles to agencies and study groups in these areas. Especially noteworthy was his service for many years as member, and for years as chairman, of the Austin Public Library Commission.

Weeks' research led to a steady stream of articles and monographs over his entire career.

A number of his articles were reprinted in collections, notably those on legislation that were included in collections on administrative and constitutional law. Among his later contributions were his monographs on successive presidential elections in Texas.

Weeks supervised numerous master's thesis and Ph.D. dissertation projects. Students who worked with him on these projects and in other ways are indebted to him for the exacting standards he set for them and for the generous aid he always gave to his students. Colleagues who worked with him over a 44-year period will recall gratefully his assiduous service to his department and his thoughtfulness and kindness to his colleagues.
