

Notes on the Contributors

Zhao, Tingyang is a professor of philosophy at Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, and also a Beijing City Chair Professor of philosophy at Capital Normal University. The author of On Possible Lives (1994, 1995 by Sanlian Press and 2004, 2005 by Renmin Univ. Press) and A World without World-view (2003, 2005 by Renmin Univ. Press), and All-under-heaven System as a World Institution (2005 by Jiangsu Edu-Press).

Lu, Jiande received his education from Fudan University, Shanghai, and Cambridge University. He is professor and Deputy Director of the Institute of Foreign Literature, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. He contributes to China's leading intellectual journals and is also the author of Dr Zhivago and Other Essays (Beijing, 1996), Fragments of Broken Systems: Studies in British and American Literature (Beijing, 2001) and Interests Behind Ideas: Essays in Cultural Politics (Shanghai, 2005). Currently he is editing a two volume project entitled 'Modern Literature in a Changing World'.

Francesco Sisci (Taranto, Italy, 1960) studied Classical Chinese Philosophy at the University of London. He was the first foreigner admitted to the Graduate School of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing. Former correspondent from Beijing for Ansa and Il Sole 24Ore, and China Bureau chief for Asia Times, he was granted several exclusive interviews with China's top leaders including President Jiang Zemin and premier Zhu Rongji. He is a former Director of the Institute of Italian Culture in Beijing and is currently Asia Editor for La Stampa and consultant to the China Society for Strategy and Management. He is the author of La differenza fra la Cina e il mondo (1994), Piovra Gialla (1994), Another China (web site: atimes.com), Made in China (2004), Chi ha paura della Cina (2006) and of many essays on Chinese and Asian politics published in the Italian journal Limes.

Ci, Jiwei Professor of philosophy at the University of Hong Kong and author of Dialectic of the Chinese Revolution: From Utopianism to Hedonism (Stanford University Press, 1994) and The Two Faces of Justice (Harvard University Press, 2006).

Pan, Wei PhD in Political Science, University of California, Berkeley (1996), Professor, School of International Studies, and director, Center for Chinese and Global Affairs, Peking University. Main publications: Rule of Law and the Myth of Democracy (Hong Kong Social Sciences Press Inc., 2003) and Farmers and Markets (Shangwu Press, 2003).

Chen, Ming Professor of Confucianism at Capital Normal University, Beijing, China. Publications include Confucianism and Historical Cultural Functions (Taiwan: Wenjin Press, 1995; Shanghai: Scholars Press, 1998; Beijing: China Social Sciences Press, 2005); A Confucian Vision (Peking University Press, 2005. E-mail:ctxf@163.com

Daniel A. Bell Professor of political philosophy and ethics at Tsinghua University (Beijing). His recent books include China's New Confucianism (Princeton University Press, 2008), Beyond Liberal Democracy (Princeton University Press, 2006), East Meets West (Princeton University Press, 2000) and the edited volume Confucian Political Ethics (Princeton University Press, 2007). He writes on China-related affairs for Dissent and the Guardian's 'Comment is free' blog.

Zhou, Lian is Associate Professor of Political Philosophy and Ethics at Renmin University of China. He holds a BA (1996) and an MA (1999) in Philosophy from Peking University, and a PhD from the Chinese University of Hong Kong (2005). His most recent book is Foundations of Modern Political Legitimacy (Beijing: San Lian Press, 2008).

Yi, Junqing Professor of Marxist philosophy & Director of Center for Philosophy of Culture, Heilongjiang University. Main publications include Modernization and Critique of Everyday Life (2005, Renmin Press), Philosophy of Culture (2001, 2005, Yunnan Press), Humanistic Critical Theory (2005, Renmin Univ. Press) and Neo-Marxism in the 20th Century (2007, Heilongjiang Edu-press).

Xiao, Wei Professor at Tsinghua University, Beijing, China. She received her MA and PhD from Renmin University, China. Her overseas experience includes conducting research at Keele University (United Kingdom), Oxford University (United Kingdom), Harvard University (USA) and the University of Alberta (Canada). She is also the author of six monographs, and the translator of seven translated books (from English into Chinese). She has done research on ethics, gender studies, public health ethics and bioethics.

Xia, Nianxi Professor of logic at Capital Normal University. She received her MA from Nankai University and PhD from Renmin University. She is currently engaged in research on the logic of natural language and philosophy of logic.