‘Books must be read as

DELIBERATELY
& RESERVEDLY
as they were written’

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden

Between 1845 and 1847 Thoreau lived alone in a hut on the shore of Walden Pond. During this experiment in solitary living he had plenty of time to read the classics: ‘the noblest recorded thoughts of man’.

Over 150 years later, Walden, Thoreau’s account of these years, is itself firmly established as a classic work of literature.

Together with 700 other titles, it is available in Oxford World’s Classics — the series that combines definitive texts with the finest notes and introductions.

Thoreau wrote that ‘Books are the treasured wealth of the world’. To find out what riches the Oxford World’s Classics list holds, call Helen Morton for a Free Catalogue on 01865 267144.

NEW SURVEYS IN THE CLASSICS

#28

VIRGIL

by Philip Hardie
University of Cambridge

<http://www.oup.co.uk/gromej>

The author revisits the subject of the first New Survey in the Classics, published in 1967, and explores the new literary approaches of the last thirty years. This New Survey is well over twice the length of the original. Individual chapters are devoted to Virgil's three major works, the Eclogues, Georgics, and Aeneid, and there is a final chapter on style, in which a passage of the Aeneid is closely analysed, using the techniques of practical criticism.

Sotades

Symbols of Immortality on Greek Vases

HERBERT HOFFMANN

- What does the imagery of these decorated vases really signify?

This book, on the fifth-century BC Athenian vase-painter, Sotades, concentrates on the inherent meaning of the imagery of these decorated vases. It argues that, contrary to widely held conceptions, there is an underlying unity of meaning in Greek vases and their imagery, a unity rooted in the religious beliefs and ritual practices of the society from which they spring.

The Roman Family in Italy

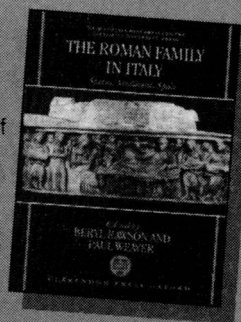

Status, Sentiment, Space

BERYL RAWSON and PAUL WEAVER

The Roman family is a key concept in the understanding of Roman society at all levels, from the aristocratic élite to slaves. The intertwined themes of status, sentiment, and space, with the use of many types of evidence, from the legal and literary to the iconographical and archaeological, enable the contributors to this book to set out new insights into the family life of the people of Roman Italy.

The Insula of the Menander at Pompeii

Volume 1: The Structures

ROGER LING

With contributions by: PAUL ARTHUR, GEORGIA CLARKE, ESTELLE LAZER, LESLEY A. LING, PETER RUSH, and ANDREW WATERS

This is the first of three volumes which offer a detailed analysis of one of the major city-blocks in ancient Pompeii, an archaeological site of international renown, but one on which few surveys have been published. Volume one deals with the architecture within the block, the largest structure of which is the House of Menander.

Horace's Narrative Odes

MICHÈLE LOWRIE

This book analyses the different use of lyric and narrative in Horace's Odes. On the formal level, numerous odes contain narration. Together they tell a larger story about the aesthetic and political demands on the poet's development as a lyricist. At issue is whether Horace can ever truly become a poet of praise.

0-19-815053-9, 394 pp, Clarendon Press, July 1997, £45.00

Virgil's Aeneid

Semantic Relations and Proper Names

MICHAEL PASCHALIS

Paschalis offers a new reading of the whole Aeneid based on the meaning of proper names and using the scene of Laocoon and the Trojan Horse as a model. It sheds fresh light on every episode and book of the epic from the storm of Aeneid 1 to the death of Turnus.

TEXTBOOK

As the Romans Did

A Sourcebook in Roman Social History

Second Edition

JO-ANN SHELTON

The selections, all in English translations prepared by the author, are drawn from a wide array of documents — letters, manuals, recipes, graffiti, and inscriptions as well as literary sources — and together they offer a fascinating glimpse into family life, housing entertainment, health, education, religion, and other important topics. For the new edition, new selections have been added and bibliographical material has been updated.
