The Palaces of Crete

JAMES WALTER GRAHAM

The author intends this book both as a preparation for a visit to Crete and as an actual guide to the sites. A large proportion of the illustrations—his own photographs, drawings, and models—are published for the first time in book form. 60s net
Princeton University Press

Fifteenth Century England

PERCIVAL HUNT

The people of fifteenth century England are here presented against their own background of court, castle, monastery and the streets of medieval London. 21s net

The Norman Monasteries and their English Possessions

DONALD MATTHEW

A study of the lands and churches in England which belonged to monasteries across the Channel for nearly 400 years. No work of comparable breadth has reconstructed the history of these much maligned properties from the muniments surviving on both sides of the Channel, and incidentally light is shed on several misunderstood corners of Anglo-Norman society. 27s 6d net

The Script of Humanism

Some Aspects of Humanistic Script 1460–1560

JAMES WARDROP

Prepared for publication by E. M. WARDROP

The author suggests lines of inquiry into the origins of italic and traces the development of humanistic cursive; its rise in antiquarian and scholarly coteries; its establishment as a bookhand; its adaptation to curial use and its embodiment in the writing-books of the sixteenth century. Illustrated. 75s net

The Life and Adventures of Thomas Coryate

MICHAEL STRACHAN

Eccentric and witty, one of the most tireless, inquisitive, and courageous of English travellers, Thomas Coryate died in India in 1617 at the age of forty. This absorbing book not only tells the story of his European tour, described in Coryat's Crudities (published 1611), but also his travels in the East, which are much less generally known.
