

Figures

---

I.1 A typology of informal markets	page 10
1.1 Informal transfers and Islamist activism in the remittance boom in Egypt	91
2.1 Informal transfers and Islamist activism in the remittance boom in Sudan	118
3.1 Remittance inflows in Northern Somalia	132
3.2 Labor remittance recipients by Isaaq subclan, Northwest Somalia	133
3.3 Clan networks and remittance transfers in Northern Somalia	136
3.4 Informal transfers and ethnic politics in the remittance boom in Somalia	148
4.1 Remittances as a proportion of exports/GDP/imports in Egypt	154
5.1 Trends in remittances as proportion of GDP, exports, and imports in Sudan	182
5.2 Sudan's balance of payments trends with a focus on remittances and deteriorating exports	193
5.3 Sudan's balance of payments trends reflecting the change in remittances versus non-remittances sources of revenue	195
5.4 Oil exports as share of total exports, GDP, and remittances in Sudan, 1995–2010	197
6.1 Remittance recipients by Isaaq subclans in Somalia	239
6.2 Remittances by selected clans in Northwest and Northeast Somalia	255
7.1 Hierarchical structure of the Dulab and al-Jama'a al-Islamiyya in Imbaba, Cairo	279