The Institutional Origins of the Great Leap Forward

David Bachman

In this book David Bachman examines the origins of the Great Leap Forward (GLF), a program of economic reform that must be considered one of the great tragedies of Communist China, estimated to have caused the death of between 14 and 28 million Chinese. Bachman proposes a provocative reinterpretation of the origins of the GLF that stresses the role of the bureaucracy.

Political Support in a Representative Democracy
Allan Kornberg and Harold D. Clarke

The related subjects of political legitimacy and system support are key theoretical concerns of students of democratic societies. They have received very little scholarly attention, however, because of the conceptual and methodological complexities they engender. In this book, the authors address these concerns through systematic multivariate analyses of the sources, distribution and consequences of variations in citizen support for key political objects in one such society, Canada.

INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM:

TWO LEAGUE OF NATIONS CONVENTIONS, 1934-1937.

By Martin David Dubin

1991. 18 microfiche and Guide/Index
ISBN 0-527-25205-0 $90.00

Following the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Minister Louis Barthou, the League of Nations created an expert committee that developed two conventions: one to define "international terrorism" and a second to establish an international criminal tribunal to repress terrorism.

This microfiche project presents the League proceedings, texts, reports, and other documents pertaining to these two conventions, plus additional related diplomatic materials - many never before published. The Guide/Index contains an explanatory essay, a chronology of events, a glossary of names, and an index to the microfiche.

This text is remarkably appropriate to modern-day debates on terrorism.

CHINA IN AND OUT OF THE CHANGING WORLD ORDER

BY SAMUEL S. KIM

At no time since the end of World War II has the question of a new world order seemed more urgent, promising, and open-ended than it has over the past several years. The momentous but unexpected peaceful changes gave way to a sense of a global political system in transition, generating in 1990 a global debate on post-cold war world order choices and directions. China's sheer physical size and its geopolitical and demographic importance invariably make it part of both the world order problem and the world order solution. The Chinese government has joined this global debate with its own call for a "new international political and economic order," and for the first time in the history of the PRC the Chinese press generated in 1991 a flurry of programmatic essays on a new world order. Drawing from the recent Chinese rhetorical and behavioral referents, this monograph seeks to provide a theoretical and empirical foundation for defining China's place in the contending visions and models of the emerging world order.

The Politics of Economic Adjustment

International Constraints, Distributive Conflicts, and the State

Edited by Stephan Haggard and Robert R. Kaufman

In the 1980s some developing countries adopted orthodox market-oriented policies in response to international economic crises, others experimented with alternative programs, and still others failed to develop coherent adjustment strategies of any sort. Building on the case studies in Economic Crisis and Policy Choice, edited by Joan M. Nelson, these essays offer comparative analysis of divergent experiences with macroeconomic stabilization and structural adjustment.

Economic Discrimination and Political Exchange

World Political Economy in the 1930s and 1980s

Kenneth A. Oye

Did bilateral and regional bargaining choke off international commerce and finance in the 1930s and prolong the Great Depression? And is the open world economic system now being placed at risk by explicitly discriminatory practices that erode respect for the GATT, the IMF, and the IBRD? Most political economists would answer in the affirmative, but Kenneth Oye shows how economic discrimination can foster international economic openness by facilitating political exchange.

Analogies at War

Korea, Munich, Dien Bien Phu, and the Vietnam
Decisions of 1965

Yuen Foong Khong

From World War I to Operation Desert Storm, American policymakers have repeatedly invoked the "lessons of history" as they contemplated taking their nation to war. Do these historical analogies actually shape policy, or are they primarily tools of political justification? Yuen Foong Khong argues that leaders use analogies not merely to justify policies but also to perform specific cognitive and information-processing tasks essential to political decision-making. Khong identifies what these tasks are and shows how they can be used to explain the U.S. decision to intervene in Vietnam.

Morality and American Foreign Policy

The Role of Ethics in International Affairs

Robert W. McElroy

Most international relations specialists since World War II have assumed that morality plays only the most peripheral role in the making of substantive foreign policy decisions. Robert McElroy shows that moral norms can, and do, significantly affect international affairs by their influence on individual decisionmakers, domestic public opinion, and national reputation abroad.

" . . . none of us who study international politics should pass up the opportunity to read this carefully crafted set of case studies that shows how moral norms can have political significance."

Confronting the Costs of War

Military Power, State, and Society in Egypt and Israel

Michael N. Barnett

What determines the strategies by which a state mobilizes resources for war? And does war preparation strengthen or weaken the state in relation to society? In looking at these questions, Michael Barnett develops a novel theoretical framework that traces the connection between war preparation and changes in state-society relations, and applies that framework to Egypt from 1952 to 1977 and Israel from 1948 through 1977.

THE ARAB-ISRAELI CONFLICT ON THE THRESHOLD OF NEGOTIATIONS

BY YEHOSEFAT HARKABI

This essay analyzes recent developments in the Arab-Israeli conflict, drawing some important theoretical distinctions in terminology. According to the author, the conflict is characterized by absolute positions, a feature that has escaped the attention of many commentators and the public. Such positions are autonomous and not derived from the rival's position; thus, they are not influenced by changes in the rival's positions or by its promises. The Arab position had been absolute in its call for the destruction of Israel; now the official Israeli position, which calls for Israel to retain all of the occupied territories and the settlements, is absolute. The article then reviews changes in the adversaries' positions and discusses the role of the United States and the effects of the Iraqi war. The author concludes with an analysis of the present circumstance and the possibilities of a move toward negotiations to resolve the conflict.
