FEATURING:

555

Protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the Adoption of an Additional Distinctive Emblem (Protocol III),
Introductory Note by Jean-François Quéguiner

The International Committee of the Red Cross adopted a new distinctive emblem in addition to the already existing emblems, the red cross and the red crescent.

562

International Court of Justice: Case Concerning Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda)

The International Court of Justice (the "Court") held that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the case brought by the Democratic Republic of the Congo against the Republic of Rwanda. Although the Court affirmed that the principles underlying the Genocide Convention are "rights and obligations erga omnes," it held that "the fact that a dispute relates to compliance with a norm having such a character... cannot of itself provide a basis for the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain that dispute."

673

Inter-American Commission on Human Rights: Pertinent Parts of October 28, 2005
Reiteration and Further Amplification of Precautionary Measures
(Detainees in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba)

The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights requested, inter alia, that the United States "take the immediate measures necessary to have the legal status of the detainees at Guantánamo Bay effectively determined by a competent tribunal" and to "take all measures necessary to thoroughly and impartially investigate, prosecute and punish all instances of torture and other mistreatment that may be perpetrated against the detainees at Guantánamo Bay."

716

United Nations Economic and Social Council, Commission on Human Rights: Situation of Detainees at Guantánamo Bay

In the report the Special Rapporteurs conclude that "the United States Government should either expeditiously bring all Guantánamo Bay detainees to trial...or release them without further delay." It is further recommended that the United States Government "close the Guantánamo Bay detention facilities without further delay."

742

Reply of the Government of the United States of America to the Report of the Five UNCHR
Special Rapporteurs on Detainees in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

In its reply, the United States declares that it "profoundly objects to the Report both in terms of process and of substance and underscores that the Report's factual and legal assertions are inaccurate and flawed." The United States claims that it "offered the Special Rapporteurs unprecedented access to Guantánamo."

Foreword

2006 marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of The American Society of International Law. During the Centennial year, ASIL publications will use the Society's Centennial logo that appears on this issue of International Legal Materials. The Society's history, The American Society of International Law's First Century: 1906-2006 by ASIL Secretary Frederic L. Kirgis was published by Martinus Nijhoff Publishers in early 2006. This work not only reflects on the Society's development as an institution, but also places this development in the context of world events in the 20th century. With hindsight, we know that the 20th century was a tumultuous one. It was, however, also an exceptionally productive one for international law. For multilateral treaties alone, the twentieth century saw the conclusion and adoption of more such treaties than in the 250 years following the Peace of Westphalia in 1648.

It is therefore no surprise that one of the important initiatives ASIL took from its founding was to collect, to report on, and to make accessible important international legal materials. To this end, for the Society's first 55 years, documents appeared as part of the American Journal of International Law either in an Official Documents section or in supplements. In the early 1960s, the Society's Executive Council approved the preparation and publication of a periodical dedicated to identifying and disseminating important international law materials; since 1962, International Legal Materials has appeared six times a year and is now recognized worldwide as an important source of information on international law. ILM's mission to identify, to report on, and to make available such materials continues and now extends beyond print. The ILM editors and staff produce the electronic awareness bulletin, International Law In Brief, that is delivered to users by e-mail and can take them directly to materials available on the Internet.

As the Society looks to its second century and rededicates itself to its founding purpose to advance international law, we remain committed to providing the highest quality information to the broadest possible audience. International Legal Materials and its related suite of products are a central part of this mission.

INTERNATIONAL LEGAL MATERIALS®

Statement of Editorial Policy

International Legal Materials is a core publication of The American Society of International Law that reproduces texts of documents reflecting the broad scope and evolution of international law. The range of covered subjects has expanded from traditional topics such as international organizations, jurisdiction, maritime law and trade to include developments in fields such as electronic commerce, environmental law, human rights and war crimes jurisprudence.

International Legal Materials serves as both a bi-monthly information service and a widely recognized archive of international law documents for a diverse, global community of legal scholars, government officials, private practitioners and institutions sharing a common interest in international law. To meet the varied demands of such a readership, documents are selected from world-wide sources on the basis of their present and future legal significance. For this reason, purely political or issue-advocacy documents are usually excluded from consideration, as are draft laws not in final form or lacking a unique, lasting character.

International Legal Materials is prepared for publication in Washington, D.C. by a staff of editors acting with both the advice of the Editorial Advisory Committee and the assistance of Corresponding Editors around the world. In order to reproduce the texts of selected documents under tight production schedules, the best available source is used, whether electronic or printed. To best ensure the quality of electronic texts, the ILM Office staff works in conjunction with official sources to correct any apparent errors.

Guidelines for Submission of Documents

The ILM Office welcomes any effort to bring suitable documents to the Office's attention. Electronic files or web links are required for publication, although printed texts can be used for initial deliberations regarding republication.

The authenticity (i.e. official version status) of submitted documents must be easily verifiable. This is facilitated by submitting files or print versions which are clearly attributable to the original source, or by providing links to documents on the original source's official website.

If the official version of a document is not available in English, an unofficial translation is acceptable. The original text must accompany such a translation.

Introductory Notes

Introductory Notes are brief articles from one to three pages in length which are intended to provide background information for a document reproduced in ILM.

For example, an Introductory Note for a treaty might include a short history of the negotiations, the dates of signature and entry into force. An Introductory Note for legislation would give its history and international significance, while one for judicial proceedings would provide the background of the case.

Acceptance of Materials and Corrections

Print submissions cannot be returned. Translators and others submitting material will be notified of the acceptance of their document for publication.

Once a translation or Introductory Note has been accepted for reproduction, The American Society of International Law will send a publication agreement to the author.

Translators and Introductory Note Authors shall be acknowledged in International Legal Materials.

In some cases minor editorial or typographical alterations may be made without contacting the author or translator. Major corrections will be sent to the author or translator for approval. Corrected Introductory Notes or translations must be returned within the time specified.
