Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Anthony Bushard is associate professor of music history at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. He is the author of Leonard Bernstein's On the Waterfront: A Film Score Guide (Scarecrow Press, 2013), co-author of Music as Art, Discipline, and Profession (independently published for iPad), and co-editor of Anxiety Muted: American Film Music in a Suburban Age (Oxford University Press, forthcoming 2014). His work has also been featured in the New Grove Dictionary of Jazz (2nd edition), the Journal of Film Music, Studies in Musical Theatre, College Music Symposium, the Journal of Music History Pedagogy, American Music, and Notes.

Daniel S. Godfrey is professor of composition at Syracuse University's Setnor School of Music, and has also held visiting faculty appointments at the Eastman School of Music and the Indiana University School of Music. Godfrey has earned awards and commissions from the J. S. Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Fromm Music Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Bogliasco Foundation, the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and the Barlow Endowment for Music Composition, among many others. He has a lengthy catalog of published and recorded works, and has written extensively on contemporary music.

Michael W. Harris teaches courses on rock history, the American film musical, and music appreciation at the University of Colorado Boulder and Metropolitan State University of Denver. He has presented papers on Japanese film music and the work of Jerry Goldsmith at numerous conferences and has published previously in Cinema Journal.

Catherine Haworth is lecturer in music at the University of Huddersfield. Her research focuses on musical practices of representation and identity construction across various media, with a particular focus on music for film and television. Recent projects include guest editorship of a gender and sexuality special issue of Music, Sound, and the Moving Image; an article in Music and Letters on music and female detectives in 1940s crime films; and the forthcoming, co-edited collection Gender, Age, and Musical Creativity.

Paul R. Laird is professor of musicology at the University of Kansas, where he teaches courses on music of the Baroque and twentieth century, and music in the United States. His scholarly expertise includes musical theater, Leonard Bernstein, Stephen Schwartz, and the Spanish villancico.

Hannah Lewis is assistant professor of musicology at the University of Texas at Austin. She completed her Ph.D. at Harvard University in 2014, where she wrote her dissertation on music in early sound film in the United States and France, examining the ways directors, producers, and composers responded to technological change. She has presented at national and regional meetings of the American Musicological Society and the Society for American Music. Her research interests include film music, twentieth-century avant-garde and experimental music, and musical theater.

Christopher E. Mehrens has been the head of the music library at Arizona State University since 2007. He holds an MLS with a specialization in music librarianship from Indiana University and a Ph.D. in musicology from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research interests focus on American music and music criticism, library administration, collection development and management, and emerging trends in music librarianship.

Nathan Platte is an assistant professor of musicology at the University of Iowa. His articles have appeared in The Journal of Film Music, Music and the Moving Image, 19th-Century Music, The Journal of Musicology, and several anthologies. He co-edited The Routledge Film Music Sourcebook with James Wierzbicki and Colin Roust and co-authored Franz Waxman's Rebecca: A Film Score Guide (Scarecrow Press), with David Neumeyer. He is now writing a book on music in the films of David O. Selznick.

Stephan Prock is senior lecturer at the New Zealand School of Music, where he teaches composition and music studies. He holds a D.M.A. in composition from Cornell University and his music has been widely performed in the United States, Europe, Australia, and New Zealand. In addition to his compositional activities, he is concurrently writing a book on music and male subjectivity in postwar Hollywood cinema.

Benjamin Sears is a singer and musicologist in Boston. He is editor of The Irving Berlin Reader. With pianist Bradford Conner, he has six Berlin CD releases, including over fifty premiere recordings. They have also recorded CDs of the Gershwins, E. Y. Harburg, Sammy Cahn, and others. With Conner, he has reconstructed three early Berlin shows, and Dietz & Schwartz's The Band Wagon.

Larry M. Timm is professor of music at California State University, Fullerton, where he teaches oboe and courses on film music. He is the author of The Soul of Cinema:

An Appreciation of Film Music (5th ed., 2014), one of the first books of its kind. Timm has been an active Hollywood studio musician since the 1970s, and his oboe and English horn solos have been heard on many motion picture and television film scores, and other recordings. He currently serves on the Editorial Board of the Film Music Journal.

Mariana Whitmer is executive director of the Society for American Music and Program Director at the Center for American Music at the University of Pittsburgh, where she also teaches a course on music and film. Whitmer is the author of Jerome Moross's The Big Country: A Film Score Guide (Scarecrow Press, 2012), and is currently working on a book about music in the classic Hollywood Western. She has contributed essays to Music in the Western, edited by K. Kalinak (Routledge, 2010), and Anxiety Muted: American Film Music in a Suburban Age, edited by Stanley Pelkey and Anthony Bushard (Oxford University Press, forthcoming).
