AMERIGO CARUSO is assistant professor of modern and contemporary history at the University of Greifswald (Department of History, Domstraße 9a, Greifswald, D 17487; email: amerigo.caruso@uni-greifswald.de). He was awarded his PhD in November 2017 from Saarland University, Germany. He is the author of “Blut und Eisen auch im Innern”. Soziale Konflikte, Massenpolitik und Gewalt in Deutschland vor 1914 (2021). His current work explores the practice and theory of emergency powers in nineteenth- and twentieth-century Europe.

TOMÁŠ GECKO is senior lecturer at the Institute of Economic and Social History, Faculty of Arts, Charles University (nám. J. Palacha 1/2, Prague 1, 116 38, Czech Republic, email: tomas.gecko@ff.cz) and postdoctoral fellow at the Masaryk Institute and Archives of the Czech Academy of Sciences. He was awarded his PhD in October 2017 from the Charles University, Czech Republic. His research interest has been focused on business history, market monopolization, history of science and international economic and scientific relations.

STEFAN HANß is senior lecturer at the University of Manchester (Samuel Alexander Building, Oxford Road, Manchester M13 9PL; email: stefan.hanss@manchester.ac.uk). His research focuses on material culture and cultural encounters in the early modern world. Hanß published widely on the Battle of Lepanto, Mediterranean slavery, and Ottoman language-learning in the early modern period, as well as concepts of time. His current research examines the history of early modern hair and featherwork, exploring new trajectories in material culture studies such as the use of digital microscopes. Hanß was awarded a British Academy Rising Star Engagement Award and a Philip Leverhulme Prize in History.

KRISTÝNA KAUCKÁ is postdoctoral fellow at the Masaryk Institute and Archives of the Czech Academy of Sciences (Department for Modern Social and Cultural History, Gabčíkova 2362/10, Prague 8, 182 00, Czech Republic; email: kaucka@mua.cas.cz). She was awarded her PhD in February 2017 from the Charles University, Czech Republic. Her current work deals with time series while interconnecting the dynamics of social and economic changes during the “long” 19th century and the “short” 20th century.

PAUL MICHAEL KURTZ is a research fellow of the Flemish Research Council (FWO) at Ghent University (Department of Philosophy & Ethics, Blandijnberg 2, 9000 Ghent, Belgium; email: paulmichael.kurtz@ugent.be). Holding a PhD from the University of Göttingen (2016), he focuses on the history of intellectual and religious culture in modern Germany, with a concentration on biblical, classical, and Orientalist studies. Most recently, he has authored “How Nineteenth-Century German Classicists Wrote the Jews out of Ancient History,” in History & Theory (2019); “The Silence on the Land: Ancient Israel versus Modern Palestine in Scientific Theology,” in Negotiating the Secular and the Religious in the German Empire: Transnational Approaches, edited by Rebekka Habermas (2019); and “The Philological Apparatus: Science, Text, and Nation in the Nineteenth Century,” in Critical Inquiry (2021).

CLAIRE MORELON is ERC postdoctoral researcher at the University of Padua (DiSSGeA, Via del Vescovado, 30, 35141 Padova, Italy; email: claire.morelon@unipd.it). She was awarded her PhD from the University of Birmingham and the Institut d'Études Politiques (Paris) in 2015 and was then Junior Research Fellow at the Queen's College, University of Oxford. She is preparing her first monograph for publication entitled Streetscapes of War and Revolution: Prague, 1914–1920. Her current work explores counter-reactions to the push for democratisation in early twentieth-century Austria-Hungary.

Published since 1968, Central European History is the primary venue for scholarly exchange and debate of central Europe's diverse and complex history. The journal publishes on a range of topics, bringing research articles, book and film reviews and review essays, discussion fora, and other forms of scholarly writing to a broad audience of specialists and non-specialists in four issues per year. Spanning the medieval to the modern period, CEH offers a space for creative approaches to understanding the region's past, while continually reassessing its conceptual and geographic boundaries and their representations. CEH publishes work related to German-speaking and German-identified peoples, as well as work on non-German-speakers in the historic states and regions of central Europe, including the Habsburg lands, Austria, and Switzerland. The journal welcomes submissions that expand and de-territorialize the region's historic frames of reference, taking identity, language, and space—and the complex links and ruptures among them—seriously. CEH perennially engages anew the old question, “what and where is central Europe?”

Editorial Policy

Central European History welcomes manuscripts using all approaches to history and dealing with all historical periods. Because space is limited, the journal does not accept articles that have been or will be published elsewhere. Most research articles are 10–12,000 words, including notes. Manuscripts submitted to Central European History should not be under consideration by any other journal. If the Editor learns that an article Central European History is considering is also under submission at another journal, Central European History's consideration will cease. Book Reviews range from 800–1000 words and are commissioned by the Associate Editor. Unsolicited book reviews are not accepted. Authors may submit articles in languages other than English but only after consulting the Editor. Some financial support may be available to defray the costs of translation into English if a manuscript is accepted.

All article manuscripts should be submitted via ScholarOne (<https://mc.manuscript-central.com/ccc>). Authors should please take care to remove any information that might identify them as author, and follow the prompts in ScholarOne to make their manuscripts anonymous. The entire text of all manuscripts, including footnotes and headings, must be prepared in double-spaced typescript with generous margins to allow for copyediting. Footnotes must be numbered consecutively.

All materials will be edited to conform with The Chicago Manual of Style in matters of punctuation, capitalization, and format. Final decisions on style remain with the editor.
