Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Contributors

Karen Ahlquist teaches at the George Washington University in Washington, D.C. She is the author of Democracy at the Opera: Music, Theater, and Culture in New York City, 1815–60 (University of Illinois Press, 1997), and editor of Chorus and Community (University of Illinois Press, 2006). She writes on European musical traditions in the nineteenth century, and has recently published in Musical Quarterly and American Orchestras in the Nineteenth Century (University of Chicago Press, 2012).

Patrick Burke is Associate Professor of Ethnomusicology at Washington University in St. Louis. He is the author of Come In and Hear the Truth: Jazz and Race on 52nd Street (University of Chicago Press, 2008) and recently co-edited (with Gerald Early and Mina Yang) “American Music,” a 2013 special issue of Daedalus: Journal of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is currently writing a book that addresses the relationship between rock music and the radical political movements of the late 1960s.

Raoul Camus is Professor Emeritus of Music at the City University of New York and area editor for bands for both editions of the Grove Dictionary of American Music. A retired army reserve bandmaster, he has honorary memberships in ABA, IGEB, NBA and the Company of Fifers and Drummers. A founder and past president of the Sonneck Society (now the Society for American Music), he has written articles on bands and their repertoire in journals, encyclopedias, and the Alta Musica series.

Mark Clague is Associate Professor of Musicology, African and African American Studies, American Culture, Non-Profit Management, and Entrepreneurship at the University of Michigan. He serves as Editor-in-Chief of the George and Ira Gershwin Critical Edition and Co-Editor-in-Chief of Music of the United States of America. He is founding board chair of the Star Spangled Music Foundation and editor and producer of the Star Spangled Songbook and its associated recording project Poets & Patriots: A Tuneful History of “The Star-Spangled Banner.”

Walter Aaron Clark is Professor of Musicology and Director of the Center for Iberian and Latin American Music at the University of California, Riverside. In addition to editing or co-editing five books on Spanish and Latin American music, he has authored Oxford University Press biographies of Isaac Albéniz (1999), Enrique Granados (2006), and Federico Moreno Torroba (2013, with William Krause). He is the editor of the Oxford series Currents in Latin American and Iberian Music.

John Hausmann is a Ph.D. student at the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music. He is currently writing his dissertation on parody, community, and memory in twentieth-century American music, which will include chapters on “Weird Al” Yankovic, P. D. Q. Bach, and the Grateful Dead. He also hosts a weekly radio show focused on live and improvised musics.

Panayotis (Paddy) League is a Ph.D. candidate in ethnomusicology at Harvard University. His research focuses on music and poetry in the Greek Aegean and the diatonic button accordion at rural festivals in Northeastern Brazil. He has published articles in Classics@, the online journal of Harvard’s Center for Hellenic Studies; the online Portfolio of the Department of Musicology and Ethnomusicology at Boston University; and Forum Folkloristica. He is also an active performer of Greek, Irish, and Brazilian music on the fiddle, accordion, and various lutes.

Matthew Mugmon is Assistant Professor of Musicology at the University of Arizona. He completed his Ph.D. in historical musicology at Harvard University in 2013. His research centers on musical modernism in the United States and in Europe, with a special focus on the reception of Gustav Mahler’s music. His articles appear in Music & Letters, Journal of Musicological Research, and the forthcoming volume Rethinking Mahler.

Douglas Shadle is Assistant Professor of Musicology at the Vanderbilt University Blair School of Music. He is completing a book manuscript for Oxford University Press on symphonies written by American composers during the nineteenth century. His previous research has appeared in American Music, the Journal of Music History Pedagogy, MLA Notes, the Journal of Musicological Research, Common-place, the Register of the Kentucky Historical Society, and a digital humanities project called Verses and Fragments: The James L. Dusenbery Journal (1841–1842).

Charles Sharp teaches the history of jazz and popular music, as well as courses in ethnomusicology at California State University, Fullerton. His dissertation examined experimental musics in Los Angeles from the 1960s to the present, and his work is centered on the philosophical examination of interpretation and identity. Sharp performs both jazz and traditional Chinese music.

Denise Von Glahn is Professor of Musicology at The Florida State University where she is also Director of the Center for Music of the Americas. She has published on music and American identity; music, nature, and place; women and music; musical modernism; and Charles Ives, Edgard Varèse, and Leo Ornstein. She is currently writing a biography of Libby Larsen for the Music in American Life series at the University of Illinois Press.

Scott Warfield is Associate Professor of Music History at the University of Central Florida. He is the author of “From Hair to Rent: Is ‘Rock’ A Four-Letter Word on Broadway?” in The Cambridge Companion to the Musical (2002; 2nd ed., 2008), and he also writes frequently about Richard Strauss. His latest essay, on “The Research Paper,” appears in The Music History Classroom (Ashgate, 2012).

Robert Walser is Professor of Music at Case Western Reserve University. He is the author of the award-winning book Running with the Devil: Power, Gender, and Madness in Heavy Metal Music, and editor of Keeping Time: Readings in Jazz History, both of which will appear in second editions in fall 2014. He has also published on a wide variety of other topics in American music, and he is particularly proud of the accomplishments of his fifteen Ph.D. advisees.
