Cumulative Index 1981-1990

With over 12,000 entries, this ten-year index to the AJIL is thorough and highly specific in its coverage. The Table of Cases pinpoints the location of over 800 cases that have been discussed over the course of a decade in the AJIL. The Subject Index displays headings in bold-faced print, in addition to alphabetically listing the title of articles and the names of authors.

In this age of computerized research, the Cumulative Index is also a useful companion to researchers conducting online searches of some 10,000 pages on either LEXIS® or WESTLAW®.

For all concerned with international law and international relations, the new Cumulative Index is unquestionably an indispensable and authoritative resource.

Human Rights: An Agenda for the Next Century

Louis Henkin and John Lawrence Hargrove, Editors

The end of the Cold War has transformed the international human rights agenda for centuries to come. It has made it possible to take a fresh look at what half a century has done with the human rights idea, and has raised hopes of developing additional rights as well as more effective international enforcement of established rights. At the same time, it has spawned new conflicts, which have brought terrible events calling urgently for new means of responding to massive human rights violations. This 524-page book is the work of a group convened to study issues addressed at the UN World Conference on Human Rights held in Vienna in June 1993. It provides a basis for recommendations to the World Conference and to U.S. officials for action in response to the challenges facing the world at the turn of the century.

CUMULATIVE DIGEST OF UNITED STATES PRACTICE IN INTERNATIONAL LAW, 1981-1988. BOOK I.

Book I of the Cumulative Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1981-1988 (xvi, 1311), published by the Department of State, became available at the U.S. Government Printing Office in April. It includes materials on which work was first begun in 1989, as well as a number of articles originally submitted by its Editor, Marian Nash (Leach), to the Journal under "Contemporary Practice of the United States Relating to International Law".

The contents of the five chapters in Book I cover the following subjects: (1) International Law in General (nature, sources, relation to municipal law); (2) Subjects of International Law (states, continuity and succession of states, diplomatic relations and recognition, international organizations, self-governing and non-self-governing territories, trust and former trust territories, and other subjects of international law, such as Antarctica, Commission of the European Communities, insurgent movements (the Palestine Liberation Organization), Jerusalem, and the U.N. Council for Namibia); (3) The Individual in International Law (nationality, passports and other travel documents, aliens, refugees, extradition, and protection of human rights); (4) State Representation (diplomatic missions and embassy property, consular officers and consulates, special trade missions and trade delegations, and foreign agents); and (5) The Law of Treaties and Other International Agreements (conclusion and entry into force, observance, application, and interpretation, amendment and modification, invalidity, termination and suspension of operation, and executive agreements).

Although the work of many members of the Department's Office of the Legal Adviser, past and present, is embodied in various documents without specific attribution, the authorship of all direct Digest contributions is identified by the initials of the drafters, who included members of other U.S. Government departments or agencies. Full names appear in the Introduction. The work product of the Legal Advisers themselves is also indicated.
