SPRI Picture Library

The SPRI Picture Library contains an extensive photograph collection from the Antarctic and Arctic, as well as many original works of art. It has a wide range of both black-and-white and colour images, including polar flora and fauna, land and sea ice, icebergs, mountaineering, polar transport, and images from many polar expeditions. The collection is constantly expanding, additions being made available to the Institute by its many members and friends.

For more details or prices, please contact

Prints of many of these photographs can be obtained for private use or for editorial, educational, or other purposes. We supply black-and-white or sepia images, colour prints or transparencies, and more contemporary material. We can also offer silver, bronze, or black-framed prints – perfect for a difficult Christmas, birthday, or wedding present.

None of our material is mass produced – every print is made on request, giving buyers the opportunity to purchase exactly the image they require. Visitors are welcome by appointment; we offer a friendly and efficient service, and are happy to discuss your individual requirements.

Lecture slide sets can be made available for loan; and of course the entire collection may be used by researchers, visiting scholars, etc. With the completion of the new Shackleton Memorial Library, the entire photograph collection will be housed in its own environmentally controlled room, and visiting facilities will be comfortable and convenient.
