STEPHEN G. MORGAN is assistant professor of history at Northwest Nazarene University (Department of History and Political Science, 623 S. University Blvd, Nampa, ID 83686; email: stephenmorgan@nnu.edu). He received his PhD from the University of Notre Dame, and is preparing his dissertation “Shepherds of a Dying Flock: The Rhenish Mission, the Herero, and German Colonial Conquest in South–West Africa” for publication. His current work explores the relationships among Christianity, colonial ideology, and colonial state formation in Africa.

KAREN PAINTER is a music professor at the University of Minnesota (email: kpainter@umn.edu) and was awarded her PhD in music from Columbia University (1996). She is the author of Symphonic Aspirations: German Music and Politics, 1900–1945 and is completing a book under the working title, “The Politics of Mourning: German Music, Poetry, and the Gendering of Loss in the World Wars and Holocaust.”

KIM CHRISTIAN PRIEMEL is professor of contemporary European history at the University of Oslo (Department of Archeology, Conservation, and History, Postboks 1008 Blindern, 0315 Oslo, email: k.c.priemel@iakh.uio.no). He specializes in legal, social, and economic history, as well as in the Third Reich and Holocaust and Genocide Studies. Among his books are The Betrayal: The Nuremberg Trials and German Divergence (2016) and Flick. Eine Konzerngeschichte vom Kaiserreich bis zur Bundesrepublik (2007).

JASON ULYSSES ROSE is PhD Student at Western Michigan University (Department of History, Friedmann Hall, Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, MI 49008; email: jason.u.rose@w-mich.edu). He was awarded a MA in History in 2017 from Ball State University upon the completion of his thesis, “As The World Grows Increasingly Cosmopolitan: A Comparative and Transnational Analysis of Gender and Modernity in East Asia and North America during the Jazz Age” (2017). His current work looks at the intersections of gender, politics, religion, race, nationalism, and cosmopolitanism between 1900 and 1950 in North America.

YANARA SCHMACKS is a PhD student in Modern European History at the CUNY Graduate Center in New York (Department of History, 365 5th Ave, New York, NY 10016; email: yschmacks@gradcenter.cuny.edu). Her article “‘Only Mothers Can Be True Revolutionaries’: The Politicization of Motherhood in 1980s West German Psychoanalysis” is forthcoming in Psychoanalysis and History in April 2021. She is working on a dissertation project that explores the politics of motherhood in the three German states from the 1970s to the early 2000s.

LISA FETHERINGILL ZWICKER is Professor of History at Indiana University, South Bend (Department of History, Wiekamp Hall, Indiana University, South Bend, South Bend, IN 46634; email: zwicker@iusb.edu). She was awarded a PhD in History in 2002 from the University of California, Berkeley. She is the author of Dueling Students: Conflict, Masculinity, and Politics, 1890–1914 (2011). Her current work considers gender, politics, and everyday life, especially the experiences of Catholic and Jewish women between 1890 and 1950.

Published since 1968, Central European History is the primary venue for scholarly exchange and debate of central Europe's diverse and complex history. The journal publishes on a range of topics, bringing research articles, book and film reviews and review essays, discussion fora, and other forms of scholarly writing to a broad audience of specialists and non-specialists in four issues per year. Spanning the medieval to the modern period, CEH offers a space for creative approaches to understanding the region's past, while continually reassessing its conceptual and geographic boundaries and their representations. CEH publishes work related to German-speaking and German-identified peoples, as well as work on non-German-speakers in the historic states and regions of central Europe, including the Habsburg lands, Austria, and Switzerland. The journal welcomes submissions that expand and de-territorialize the region's historic frames of reference, taking identity, language, and space—and the complex links and ruptures among them—seriously. CEH perennially engages anew the old question, “what and where is central Europe?”

Editorial Policy

Central European History welcomes manuscripts using all approaches to history and dealing with all historical periods. Because space is limited, the journal does not accept articles that have been or will be published elsewhere. Most research articles are 10–12,000 words, including notes. Manuscripts submitted to Central European History should not be under consideration by any other journal. If the Editor learns that an article Central European History is considering is also under submission at another journal, Central European History's consideration will cease. Book Reviews range from 800–1000 words and are commissioned by the Associate Editor. Unsolicited book reviews are not accepted. Authors may submit articles in languages other than English but only after consulting the Editor. Some financial support may be available to defray the costs of translation into English if a manuscript is accepted.

All article manuscripts should be submitted via ScholarOne (<https://mc.manuscript-central.com/ccc>). Authors should please take care to remove any information that might identify them as author, and follow the prompts in ScholarOne to make their manuscripts anonymous. The entire text of all manuscripts, including footnotes and headings, must be prepared in double-spaced typescript with generous margins to allow for copyediting. Footnotes must be numbered consecutively.

All materials will be edited to conform with The Chicago Manual of Style in matters of punctuation, capitalization, and format. Final decisions on style remain with the editor.
