TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE WATER FILTER COMPANY.

SIR,—I have been using your Filter for some time, and I find that distilled water, after passing through it, loses its unpleasant odour and taste. On that account it will be of great service to render water palatable which is distilled on board ships for drinking during long voyages. I use distilled water for infusions, decoctions, and pharmaceutical preparations generally, and I consider it most desirable to get it as free from odour and taste as possible.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

P. SQUIRE,

Chemist on the Establishment of the Queen.
