

People in Political Science

land, for summer and fall semester, 1987.

Gary Bryner, Brigham Young University, is at the National Academy of Public Administration from July 1986 to September 1987.

Richard Cox, professor of political science at the State University of New York at Buffalo is scheduled to spend the academic year 1987-88 as a visiting professor at the Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island.

Robert Darcy, Oklahoma State University, will be Honorary Senior Research Fellow in Political Science, Queen's University, Belfast, for fall 1987 and visiting professor in political science, National University of Ireland, University College, Galway, for spring 1988.

Byron Daynes, visiting professor at Brigham Young University, 1986-87, from DePauw University.

Vincent Geohegan, Queen's University, Belfast, will be visiting associate professor of political science at Oklahoma State University in fall 1987.

Gordon M. Hutton, National University of Ireland, University College, Galway, will be visiting associate professor of political science at Oklahoma State University in spring 1988.

James P. Lester, on leave from Colorado State University where he is an associate professor, is a visiting scholar at the Martin School of Public Administration, University of Kentucky, and a research associate at the Council of State Governments during 1987-88.

Maurice M. Roumani, associate research professor for 1986-87 at George Washington University, department of political science.

Stan Taylor, Brigham Young University, will be a visiting scholar at the University of Kent in Canterbury, winter semester, 1988.

Joseph W. Westphal, Head, Department of Political Science, Oklahoma State University, has been selected as visiting scholar at The Institute for Water Resources in Washington, D.C. for the 1987-88 academic year.

Award Recipients

American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Five political scientists—Robert G. Gilpin, Peter J. Katzenstein, Herbert Kaufman, Herbert McClosky, and Harold Wilensky—were recently elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. British political scientist, David Edgeworth Butler, was elected as a Foreign Honorary Member.

Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies

The Social Science Research Council has selected the 1987 fellows of the Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies. Among them are the following political scientists.

Cathleen S. Fisher, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Maryland, for research on West German policy-making in the 1980s.

Mary N. Hampton, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Los Angeles, for research on the evolution of the Federal Republic of Germany in the western security regime.

Kim I. Moermond, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Columbia University, for research on the interaction between the context and conduct of West German policies in the intra-German context with the processes of change in East Germany.

Everett McKinley Dirksen Award

The 1986 Everett McKinley Dirksen Award for distinguished reporting of Congress was presented to Cokie Roberts of National Public Radio. Roberts was cited for radio broadcasts that brought the personalities, issues, and politics of Capitol

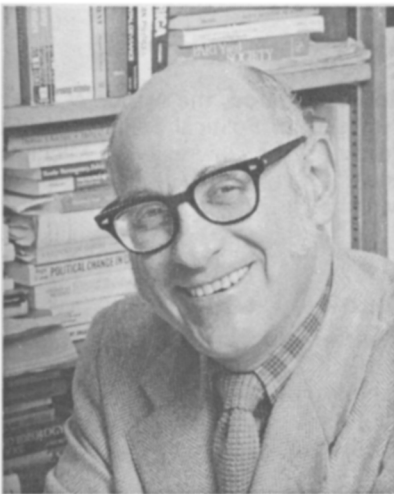

Robert G. Gilpin
Princeton University

Herbert McClosky
University of California, Berkeley
Photo by Jane Scherr

Political Scientists Named to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Harold L. Wilensky
University of California, Berkeley
Photo by Jane Scherr

Peter Katzenstein
Cornell University
Photo by Charles Harrington

(not pictured: Herbert Kaufman)

Cokie Roberts of National Public Radio has received the 1986 Everett McKinley Dirksen Award for distinguished reporting of Congress.

Hill to life. The award includes a prize of $5,000.

Exxon Lecturer

Thomas L. Pangle, professor, department of political science, University of Toronto, has been named the second Exxon Lecturer at the University of Chicago. The selection includes a prize honorarium of $25,000. He will give a series of lectures on the moral vision of the American founding, starting October 26.

Guggenheim Fellowships

The John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation has announced the award of fellowships to 273 scholars, scientists, and artists in the foundation's 63rd annual competition. Following is a list of political scientist recipients, their institutional affiliations, and their proposed studies.

R. Douglas Arnold, associate professor of politics and public affairs, Princeton University: Legislative strategy and public policy.

Stanley Hoffmann, professor of the civilization of France, Harvard University: The French national crisis, 1934-1946.

Stephen Holmes, associate professor of political science, University of Chicago: The concepts of public and private in liberal thought.

Richard A. Joseph, professor of government and of African and Afro-American studies, Dartmouth College: The political thought and action of Obafemi Awolowo of Nigeria.

John Mueller, professor of political science and of film studies, University of Rochester: Deterrence, stability, and the potential obsolescence of major war.

James N. Rosenau, professor of international relations and political science and director of the institute for transnational studies, University of Southern California: Turbulence in world politics.

Philippa Strum, professor of political science, CUNY Brooklyn College, received a fellowship last year.

MacArthur Fellowship

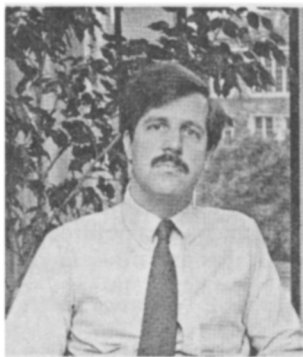

Robert Axelrod, the Arthur W. Bromage Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at The University of Michigan, is one of this year's MacArthur Fellowship winners.

Fellowships in International Peace and Security Studies

Ten awards have been made to researchers for work on international conflict by the Social Science Research Council's Program in International Peace and Security Studies. Among them are the following political scientists.

Laura Guazzone, Italy, a research student in international security studies at the Italian Institute of International Af-

Guggenheim Fellows

R. Douglas Arnold
Princeton University

Stephen Holmes
University of Chicago

John Mueller
University of Rochester

Stanley Hoffmann
Harvard University

James N. Rosenau
University of Southern California

(not pictured: Richard A. Joseph and Philippa Strum)

Robert Axelrod of the University of Michigan has been awarded a MacArthur Fellowship.

fairs in Rome, will study comparative politics and the political economy of the Middle East. Her research will examine security perceptions underlying the political behavior of the Arab states, and will investigate the extent to which a non-Western political culture produces a distinct strategic philosophy.

Gilbert Khadiagala, Kenya, a Ph.D. candidate in international relations at the Johns Hopkins University, will study international diplomacy and alliance behavior to inform his subsequent analysis of the role of Africa's "Frontline States" (Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania, and Zambia). These states have cooperated as an informal regional security alliance in the management of conflict in Southern Africa since 1975.

Rodger Payne, United States, a Ph.D. candidate in political science at the University of Maryland, will study methods of historical analysis and then apply these methods to understanding the recurrence of strategic defense debates in the United States in the nuclear era. He will examine the effect, if any, of lessons of history upon policymakers.

Sergio Aguayo, Mexico, a political scientist, will study theoretical problems implicit in the concept of national security and examine how these problems have been approached in different countries, particularly the United States. His research will seek to define Mexican national security as a stable, long-term concept, rather than being defined differently by successive Mexican governments, and to show how Mexican security interests are distinct from those of the United States and other nations by identifying nonmilitary threats to Mexico's security.

Joanna Gowa, United States, a political scientist, will study the history and analysis of international affairs, focusing upon polarity, exploitation, and stability in international relations. Her research, which will also draw upon her previous training in political economy, will seek to analyze the relative stability of bipolar and multipolar international political systems.

Anne Marie LeGloannec, France, a political scientist, will study military doctrines and technologies (both nuclear and conventional). Her research will examine pan-German nationalism, East-West German relations, and the role of the two Germanies in East-West relations. This will include a comparative study of security perceptions, interests, and goals in East and West Germany. Her study will seek out common security interests in the two nations and also examine how each Germany's perceptions of international security mesh with those of other members of their respective alliances.

Mellon Fellows

Rogan T. Kersh has received a stipend of $9,750 plus tuition to study politics at Wake Forest University. He is among 122 Mellon Fellows selected by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

National Science Foundation

NSF has offered 505 college students three-year awards for graduate study in the natural and social sciences, mathematics and engineering. The fellowships provide a stipend of $12,300 per year for full-time graduate study. The following students plan to study political science or international relations. Their listings include name of baccalaureate institution, followed by chosen institution for graduate study.

Scott Callor, Princeton University. Harvard University.

Richard Allen Forshee, Southeast Missouri State University. University of Michigan.

Steven Ross Grand, University of Virginia. Yale University.

Eric Knox Greben, Clemson University. University of Virginia.

Steven James Norton, Yale University. University of Michigan.

Diana Eva-Ann Richards, University of Washington. Yale University.

Brian Dear Taylor, University of Iowa. Yale University.

Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program

Aaron Wildavsky, professor of political science, University of California, Berkeley, is one of 13 scholars chosen to be a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar for 1987-88. The scholars will travel to some 100 colleges and universities for two-day visits to meet with students and faculty members in formal and informal sessions.

Pi Sigma Alpha Award

Mark A. Peterson, Henry La Barre Jayne Assistant Professor, department of government, Harvard University, has received the Pi Sigma Alpha award for his paper, "Congressional Responses to Presidential Proposals: Impact, Effort, and Politics." The paper was presented at the 1986 meeting of the Midwest Political Science Association.

United States Institute of Peace

The following political scientists have received awards from the U.S. Institute of Peace Grants Program.

Adam M. Garfinkle, lecturer in political science, University of Pennsylvania. A one-year grant in partial support of a book-length study of the potential role of inter-personal contacts in mediating political change between disputants. Garfinkle will take current cooperative undertakings between Israeli and Jordanian citizens as material for a case study. $10,000.

Stephen Haseler, professor of government, City of London Polytechnic, and visiting professor, University of Maryland, Baltimore County Campus. A one-year grant to complete a book on the British peace movement as a case study in the political, cultural, and ideological assumptions underlying West European peace movements generally. $32,000.

David L. Larson, associate professor of political science, University of New Hampshire. A one-year grant to assist the New Hampshire Council on World Affairs in launching a multi-year project designed to train teachers in the New Hampshire secondary schools in the international affairs and peace fields. The project proposes (1) to develop teaching strategies in topic areas related to international relations and peace education, (2) to correlate the teaching of social studies and peace education, and (3) to develop specialized curricular materials related to the above. $5,000.

David R. Segal, professor of sociology and of government and politics, University of Maryland. A one-year partial support grant to assist Segal in researching and writing a book on the experience of U.S. military participation in the Multi-national Force and Observers in the Sinai subsequent to the Camp David Accords. This book will be for use in college and university courses that deal with the peacekeeping role of the military and for use by commanders in preparing U.S. military personnel for participation in peacekeeping missions. $10,000.

People in Political Science

Rita Johnson received the dissertation award of the Western Political Science Association.

Ivan Volgyes, professor of political science and special projects officer, Institute of International Studies, University of Nebraska-Lincoln. A one-year partial support grant to permit Volgyes to research and write a book on the mediation of political change in Eastern Europe. The project will examine (1) the level of, and reasons for, violence in the settlement of political conflicts in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Poland, and (2) the role of mediating institutions, groups, and individuals in those instances where political violence was minimized or avoided. $39,900.

George Modelski, professor of political science, University of Washington. A one-year partial support grant to assist Modelski in researching and writing a book-length comparative study of the five global wars of modern history. Matters to be examined include the relationship between past conventional global wars and possible future nuclear wars and the effects of global war on subsequent world political, economic, and cultural systems. The project will focus on the Italian Wars (1494-1516), the Wars of the Grand Alliance (1689-1713), the Wars of the French Revolution, the First World War, and the Second World War. $20,000.

For additional information on these grants and on the Peace Institute's Grants Program, please contact Robert F. Turner, President, United States Institute of Peace, 730 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, DC 20503; (202) 789-5700.

Western Political Science Association

The following awards were presented at the 1987 meeting of the Western Political Science Association.

Dissertation Award ($250): Rita Johnson, Northern Arizona University, for "The Political Thinking of High School Seniors: Content, Process, and Sources of Variation." Honorable mention was given to: Jan Hendrick Staal, University of California, Berkeley, for "Publius and the National Founding: A Dangerous Greatness?"

Pi Sigma Alpha Award ($200): Douglas J. Amy, Mt. Holyoke College, for "The Politics of Environmental Mediation."

Women and Politics Award ($100): Lyn Kathlene, University of Colorado, for "The Impact of Gender Differences on Public Policy Formation."

Chicano Politics Award ($100): Henry Flores, St. Mary's University, for "Playing Power Politics the American Way: Redevelopment Policies of San Antonio and Los Angeles."

Other Awards and Honors

Edward G. Carmines, professor of political science, Indiana University (Bloomington), has received the AMOCO Foundation Award in recognition of distinguished teaching.

Gary J. Jacobsohn, professor of political science, Williams College, has been appointed Woodrow Wilson Professor of Government.

Charles H. Levine has been appointed Distinguished Professor of Government and Public Administration at The American University.

In Memoriam

R. Wallace Brewster

R. Wallace Brewster, 82, died at his home in State College, Pennsylvania, on May 17, 1987. The A.B. and M.A. degrees were earned at The Pennsylvania State University; the Ph.D. was awarded by the University of California, Berkeley, with a major in public law. Most of his professional career was spent at Penn State as professor of political science. He served one three-year term as department head and retired as professor emeritus in 1966.

On campus, Wally engaged in numerous faculty and student activities, notably the Standing Committee on Student Affairs, Faculty Advisory Committee, Liberal Arts Planning Committee, American and Pennsylvania Associations of University Professors, Committee on Tenure Dismissal, and Local 500 of Teachers Association, AFL-CIO.

Off campus, he served as an Executive Officer for the Fuel Rationing Division, OPA; Lecturer at Haverford and Hiram Colleges and also the University of Miami, Florida; Director, Institute for American Studies, L'Universite Aix-Marseille, France, 1957 and 1960; Lecturer, Mannheim College, Germany, and at the Sorbonne, University of Paris, School of Law, 1960; Director, Penn State Study Abroad Program, Strasbourg, France, 1953; lecturer, New School for Social Research Graduate Summer Program Abroad in France, Switzerland and the United Kingdom, 1949; Consultant on Public Affairs, Brookings Institution, 1960-63; Lecturer, Inter-American University, St. Germain, Puerto Rico; Lecturer, Chapman College World Campus Afloat, 1971; Administrative Consultant, Manatee Community College, Florida, 1972-75; Special Assistant to the President, Clarion State University, Pennsylvania, 1968-69; Vice President of M. J. Brewster Travel Associates, Westchester County, New York, 1973-82.

Wally's principal publications included the textbook Government in Modern Society: With Special Emphasis upon American Institutions (Boston: Houghton-Mifflin), 1st ed., 1958, 2d ed. 1963; "The Rise of the Antislavery Movement in Southwestern Pennsylvania" in Southwestern Pennsylvania Historical Magazine, Vol. 22, no. 1, March, 1939), pp. 1-18; "La Separation des Pouvoire Aux Prises Avec Les Nouvelles Forces Politique," Revue Internationales et des Institutions (July-September, 1961), pp. 273-293; "The Tribunaux Administrative et des Institutions: A Venture in Administrative Reorganization," Journal of Public Law, Vol. XI, pp. 237-259 (1962); "American University Students Abroad and the Language Problem," New Goliards, Institute for American Universities, Aix-en-Provence, France, Vol. I, pp. 3-9 (June, 1962).

Wally's wife, Margaret Berryhill Brewster, preceded him in death. One child, Mar-

Edward G. Carmines of Indiana University was recognized by the AMOCO Foundation for his distinguished teaching.