Announcement and Call for Papers

The skeptics, neopragmatists, poststructuralists, feminists, Marxists, historicists, Freudians, paleoconservatives, dissidents, and mavericks who have joined to establish Common Knowledge hold that fratricidal partisanship is a legacy of a time that is passing. Common Knowledge will publish work in cultural studies and intellectual history that redefines divisive terms and figures of the past and present in ways that make expanded sympathies credible. Now that the Berlin Wall is down, it is time to abandon simplistic distinctions— East versus West, left versus right, theory versus praxis, modern versus postmodern. It is time to elaborate a basis for practical, common knowledge.

Common Knowledge represents a commitment to go beyond established disciplines and, more importantly, beyond the factions at war in the literary and scholarly world. The idea that intellectual life is composed of "issues" and that issues are shaped like battlefields or game boards—with "sides" that one must "take"— is at best obsolete and impractical. Common Knowledge seeks to refine a new skepticism— a postmodern, postwar doubt of claims to knowledge and authority— that presents no obstacle to solidarity.

Common Knowledge will publish material that focuses on the timely and the particular rather than on the timeless and the theoretical— material that renders common knowledge possible. The editors solicit articles that reassociate intellectual communities divided by the cold war, that establish links among disparate intellectual schools, that deepen the conversation within each school, that break down the distinction between scholarly and narrative form, that reopen on higher ground debates about incommensurability, ambivalence, indeterminacy, untranslatability, and the will-to-power.

Manuscripts, proposals for articles, and books proposed for review should be sent to Common Knowledge, School of Arts and Humanities, The University of Texas at Dallas, Box 830688-JO 31, Richardson, TX 75083-0688. Journal of MULTILINGUAL and MULTICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT

Editor Derrick Sharp

Review Editor Colin Williams

Associate Editor John Edwards

This journal, with its truly international editorial board, has done much to further the course of multilingual and multicultural studies in the eleven years since it was first published. It has ranged widely in its interests and is now especially keen to extend its range by publishing more articles and research studies in the areas of cultural and intercultural studies. It will of course continue to publish papers on all aspects of bilingualism and multilingualism, on minority languages and on the rights and obligations of minorities from many points of view.

Details of recent and forthcoming issues:

Volume 12 No. 1 & 2 :Special double issue of

The Proceedings of the Sixth Nordic Conference on Bilingualism.

Papers to be published in Volume 12; 3 onwards:

- ◆ Attitudes of Swazi Teachers Towards the First Official Language; Owen G. Mordaunt.

Models and Interpretations

Selected Essays

J. A. Barnes

These essays cover a variety of topics in sociology and anthropology, including lineage systems, social networks, colonialism, underlying assumptions of social science, and the significance of time in social analysis.

Vienna and the Jews,
1867-1938

A Cultural History

Steven Beller

"Beller's is a bold, exciting, and largely convincing attempt to explain content in terms of origins. It is not the last word, but it will take its place as a major contribution."

—London Review of Books

"The book blossoms into a lucid, intellectual study, culminating in a discussion of the ethical links between the work of Arnold Schönberg, Karl Kraus and Ludwig Wittgenstein... the argument is exciting."

—The Times Higher Education Supplement

35180-4 Hardcover $39.50

Domination and Conquest

The Experience of Ireland,
Scotland and Wales, 1100-1300

R. R. Davies

"R. R. Davies' compact and pithy study has a clear goal: to determine how the Anglo-Normans came to dominate and conquer the Irish, Scots, and Welsh in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and how these subject peoples on the 'Celtic fringe' reacted to the experience of domination. He has achieved his goal through broad research, a lucid writing style, and sound analysis."

The Journal of Military History

38069-3 Hardcover $29.95

Lille and the Dutch Revolt

Urban Stability in an Era of Revolution, 1500-1582

Robert S. DuPlessis

In the scholarship on revolution as a whole, the experience of the leading textile and trading center of Lille stands out as singular. Although affected by powerful currents that provoked rebellion in many other cities, it was renowned for adhering to the existing order. This comprehensive study draws on a wide range of primary sources to illuminate the processes of selective adaptation that endowed Lille with a structural tendency to stability.

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical, or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, 102 Rackham Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-1070.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
