

REVISIONING HISTORY

Film and the Construction of a New Past
Edited by Robert A. Rosenstone

In Revisioning History thirteen historians from around the world look at the historical film on its own terms, not as it compares to written history but as a unique way of recounting the past. Each contributor looks at an example of New History cinema. These films are serious efforts to come to grips with the past—they have often grown out of nations engaged in an intense quest for historical connections, such as India, Cuba, Japan, and Germany.

"Robert Rosenstone has assembled a group of first-class historians who are concerned both about writing good history and making good films. . . . Revisioning History will be a boon for students of history and film both. . . ."

AGENTS OF APOCALYPSE

Epidemic Disease in the Colonial Philippines
Ken De Bevoise

Philippine morbidity and mortality rates were the world's highest during the period 1883–1903. Ken De Bevoise shows that those "mourning years" resulted from a conjunction of demographic, economic, technological, cultural, and political processes that had been building for centuries. He uses the Philippine case study to explore the extent to which humans participate in creating their epidemics. Interpreting the archival record with conceptual guidance from the health sciences, he sets tropical disease in a historical framework that views people as interacting with, rather than acting within, their total environment.

"The originality of the project's conception and the high quality of its execution are stunning. A pleasure to read."—Alfred W. McCoy

POLITICS AND INDUSTRIALIZATION

Early Railroads in the United States and Prussia
Colleen A. Dunlavy

How do national political institutions influence the process of industrial change? This comparative study of the birth of American and Prussian railroads offers historical insights into this critical, but seldom studied, question. Colleen Dunlavy shows how two very different political structures affected the dynamics of railroad policy making, the organization of railroad interests, and the process of technological choice.

"... a pathbreaking comparative study."—Choice

Studies in American Political Development

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Editors

Karen Orren, University of California, Los Angeles

Stephen Skowronek, Yale University

Studies in American Political Development publishes high quality scholarship covering American political change and institutional development from a historical perspective. Articles focus on government institutions and their social, economic and cultural environment. The journal features in-depth original articles, which allow scholars to elaborate on the complex patterns of state-society relations. These longer articles also encourage an interdisciplinary approach—tying in relevant issues and related themes. In addition, SAPD recognizes the importance of comparative politics to the study of American institutions.

COMPARATIVE STUDIES IN SOCIETY AND HISTORY

ISSN 0010-4175

Founded by Sylvia L. Thrupp

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical, or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, 102 Rackham Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-1070.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
