Aeschylean Drama

Michael Gagarin

Gagarin begins his interpretation with certain important aspects of the Homeric and early Greek view of human behavior. He then moves to an analysis of the historical drama, Persae. The heart of the book is the discussion of Aeschylus' masterpiece, the Oresteia. The final chapter deals more briefly with Aeschylus' three other surviving plays. Two short appendices and a bibliography conclude the work.

Department of Drama, Undergraduate

IS OFFERING AN ALTERNATIVE PROGRAM IN:

EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

The Department of Drama, Undergraduate, which offers a B.F.A. degree in acting, is pleased to announce the formation of the Experimental Theatre Wing. A limited number of students will have the opportunity to work intimately with four of New York's leading experimental theatre groups in a two-year program designed specifically for students who have already completed two years of foundation work with one of the three studios working with our Department: Stella Adler Conservatory, The Circle in the Square Theatre School, and the Lee Strasberg Theater Institute. The ETW is also open to students who have studied acting elsewhere and who wish to transfer into our Department. Students in the ETW will spend one semester with each of the following groups: The Performance Group (best known for Dionysus in 69 and The Tooth of Crime), The Ridiculous Theatrical Company (specializing in commedia dell'arte techniques), Mabou Mines (recently featured in Newsweek for their highly acclaimed Beckett production), and Richard Foreman's Ontological-Hysteric Theatre (frequently featured in The Drama Review). Students will work in unique acting, voice, and movement workshops taught from each particular group's point of view. In the last semester a production, directed by Richard Foreman, will be performed by the students. In addition to studying with the four groups, students will take dramatic literature and history of performance courses offered through the Department.

Farmyard and Four Plays by Franz Xaver Kroetz

English versions by Jack Gelber, Denise Gordon, Michael Roloff, Peter Sander and Carl Weber

Introduction by Richard Gilman

Franz Xaver Kroetz's plays have come in recent years to be recognized as the most important contribution to the West German stage since the advent of Peter Handke. But where Handke's characters are extremely articulate, Kroetz's characters come alive "not by speeches but by the oppressive silences that lie between them. What is going through the characters' minds is passionately out of proportion to the few blunt words they manage to utter. To be able to convey that contrast and to make you imagine the unspoken thought processes is the mark of an extraordinary dramatist. . . . A Van Gogh-like sense of truth and compassion towards stunted and impoverished people." [Irving Wardle reviewing Farmyard in The Times (London)]

Angel City, Curse of the Starving Class & Other Plays by Sam Shepard

Introduction by Jack Gelber

"Not only are the characters in the plays on trips, for they tell us as much, but also the shapes of the plays themselves are in the form of trips, quests and adventures. Many of the characters are high on drugs, some are high on music, still others are flying on their own words. These characters speak directly to us or to each other or to their visions: the likes of Mae West, Paul Bunyan or Jesse James. These visionary beings are in search of gold, fame or love, as indeed are their principals. Along the way we see cures, clairvoyance, the finding of lost objects and the foretelling of the future. And all this action takes place in play after play on a bare stage accompanied by spellbinding music and trance-inducing monologues." [Jack Gelber in the Introduction]

The Theatre of the Oppressed by Augusto Boal

"Augusto Boal's achievement is so remarkable, so original and so ground-breaking that I have no hesitation in describing this book as the most important theoretical work on the theatre in modern times—a statement I make without having suffered any memory lapses with respect to Stanislavsky, Artaud or Grotowski." An Annotated Facsimile of Glen Byam Shaw's 1955 Promptbook

Edited by Michael Mullin. The 1955 Stratford-upon-Avon production of Macbeth, starring Sir Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, was one of the century's great Macbeths. This facsimile of director Glen Byam Shaw's promptbook includes Shaw's notes, stage maps, and directions, describes sets and costumes, discusses the director's style and the critics' responses, and provides reminiscences by the actors along with 48 stunning Angus McBean photos. A unique resource for anyone concerned with the interpretation of Shakespeare in the theatre or the classroom.

GRADUATE DRAMA AT NYU'S SCHOOL OF THE ARTS

We don't take a literary approach. We study the play on stage; our emphasis is the history and theory of performance itself. This makes our graduate program unlike any other.

Faculty members must be more than scholars. They must be involved in practical theatre. Like Michael Kirby, author of Happenings, The Art of Time, and Futurist Performance, who is also a playwright, director, and editor of The Drama Review. Brooks McNamara is a theatre set designer as well as author of The American Playhouse in the Eighteenth Century and The Medicine Show. Richard Schechner is the author of Public Domain and Environmental Theatre. He is the founder and co-director of the Performance Group. Theodore Hoffman, the co-author of A Guide to Theatre Study, is also a critic and a teacher of improvisation.

Our A.M. program covers the history of theatre, the history of acting, directing, physical theatre, and theatrical theory. Its focus is contemporary performance practice.

Our Ph.D. program emphasizes the specialties of the faculty. Courses are offered in such areas as History of Avant-

Garde Performance (Kirby), Popular Entertainments (McNamara), Ritual and Theatre (Schechner), and Theatrical Criticism (Hoffman).

All our students must have practical theatre experience (not necessarily at the professional level). We feel our ideas will be most useful to people who are interested in doing theatre rather than merely reading about it.

There is no better place to study drama than in New York—the theatre capital of the world.
