

Development Policy Review

formerly ODI review

The Journal of the Overseas Development Institute

Edited by Sheila Page Overseas Development Institute, London

Development Policy Review is a leading quarterly journal in development studies, focusing both on the immediate questions and the broader themes in development policy. Articles analyse social and economic issues in development reflecting the different perspectives of 'North' and 'South'. New research is complemented by an extensive book review section covering important works in the field.

Published in conjunction with the Overseas Development Institute, Development Policy Review seeks to provide a forum for the exchange of views and information on development problems and policies among those directly concerned with development in business, government and other organizations. The Overseas Development Institute is an independent, non-government body set up in 1960 to promote wise action in the field of overseas development, and to keep the urgency of development issues and problems before the public and responsible authorities.

Development Policy Review is published quarterly in March, June, September and December
