Three Centuries of English Literature

The Golden Hind

An Anthology of Elizabethan Prose and Poetry

Edited by ROY LAMSON and HALLETT SMITH. A distinguished anthology of the non-dramatic literature of the Elizabethan Age. The selections give ample representation to both the poetry and the prose of the period, and illustrate its artistic achievement, social history and spirit. The texts have been carefully prepared from original 16th-century manuscripts in the light of the best modern scholarship. With biographical and critical notes, chronological table and bibliography. Illustrated. Price, $5.75

English Prose of the XVII Century
English Poetry of the XVII Century

Compiled and edited by ROBERTA FLORENCE BRINKLEY. "Dean Brinkley's two volumes fill the need for seventeenth-century anthologies. Her selections are comprehensive, and her introduction gives a proper perspective on the century."—ROBERT L. HICKEY, University of Tennessee. "Unquestionably the best in the field."—S. H. MACLAINE, Brown University. Price, each $3.95

Enlightened England

An Anthology of Eighteenth-Century Literature

Edited by WYLIE SYPHER. This important anthology presents the major 18th-century British writers against the background of their age. The editorial plan provides a better understanding of the century as a whole by integrating its creative literature with its scientific, artistic and political development. Illustrated with 25 half-tone reproductions of 18th-century paintings and drawings. With biographical and critical notes and bibliography. Price, $5.75

A Distinctive New Textbook
Correlating Literature with the Arts . . .

LITERATURE OF WESTERN CIVILIZATION

By Louis G. Locke, Professor of English, Mary Baldwin College; John P. Kirby, Professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman's College; and M. E. Porter, Assistant Professor of French and Italian, Indiana University

ORGANIZED CHRONOLOGICALLY into seven parts, the selections in this new anthology record our literary heritage from its Greek and Roman origins to the present—for the basic course in literature or the humanities. The introductions to the seven parts provide a concise literary history, delineate national literary characteristics, and correlate the selections with the other arts and culture. Further aids in this correlation: 127 carefully selected pictures illustrate man's achievement in all arts; biographical-critical notes orient the authors in their time; lists of recordings support the comments on music.

THE BALANCE and quality of the selections are outstanding. In addition to a sound representation of legends, epics, and classics, and of the literary giants from Chaucer to Eliot, the editors present lyric poetry of every age and give deserved recognition to American literature and to our distinguished contemporaries (Yates, Kafka, Rilke, Lorca, Hemingway, Faulkner, are a few). The unusually high quality of the translations—wherever possible the most recent—gives this work particular distinction. In two volumes.

Volume I—Greece through the Renaissance. 840 pages, 73 illustrations.

Volume II—Since the Renaissance. 800 pages, 54 illustrations.

EMINENT AUTHORS—DISTINGUISHED VOLUMES

Under the general editorship of Ernest Bernbaum, here are presented the selected best works of eight significant authors in the English language. Outstanding scholars have chosen the contents of each volume and have written the introductions and critical and historical notes and comments. In preparing these volumes in the "Best of" series, we have intended particularly to achieve these points: 1) a first-rate authentic text, knowingly proofread; 2) literary taste in the choice of the selections, and literary appreciation and style in the introductions and notes; 3) ample scholarly references to the best criticisms of the particular author.

ANNOUNCING A DISTINGUISHED NEW SERIES
STUDIES IN MODERN EUROPEAN LITERATURE
AND THOUGHT

This series of brief studies of European intellectual leaders is published simultaneously in England and the United States, with the aim of providing a library of provocative critical comment on present-day thought and writing. The contributing authors come from no one school of thought but are chosen for their literary sensitivity and training. The approach combines exposition with interpretation, to stress the creative achievements of the subjects. Each volume includes brief biographical and bibliographical notes on the writer under discussion, together with a list of the available English translations of his works. Published May 21st

The first four books published in this series are:

Proper Words in Proper Places

J. O. Bailey, University of North Carolina

Certain specific features distinguish this comprehensive new book from the usual freshman composition text: it has spirit and enthusiasm, its approach is constructive rather than corrective, and it emphasizes the application of rules toward more effective self-expression. The material is divided into four parts: Writing Themes, Revising Themes, Writing Longer Papers, and Reading. The abundant exercises provide practice in both writing and reading techniques.

Victor M. Hamm
Marquette University

William H. Hines
Fordham University

Employing a chronological approach, this anthology includes a variety of fresh material in addition to the familiar works expected in every book of this kind. Treatment of the period before 1450 is unusually comprehensive. Eight critical introductions touch lightly, but pertinently, on the political, social, economic, and intellectual movements in each "age."

Seven Plays of the Modern Theater

IBSEN · CHEKHOV · MAUGHAM · COWARD
O'NEILL · ANDERSON · WILLIAMS

Vincent Wall and James Patton McCormick, Wayne University

Chosen with the utmost care, the plays included in this volume are representative of as many types of drama as possible. A highly readable introduction presents the important types and theories of the drama. Preceding each individual play is a helpful chronology of the dramatist's life and a critical essay on his development as an artist.

An 3rd Edition Approach to Literature

By Cleanth Brooks, John T. Purser and Robert Penn Warren

The new edition of this elementary anthology for introductory college courses in literature offers a greater variety and range of selections and more analyses, questions, and exercises. Thirteen new stories have been introduced, fifty-six new poems, seven new essays of contemporary interest, and three modern dramas. Three novelles illustrate many of the characteristics of the novel form. The new dramas are: Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, Miller's All My Sons, and Maugham's The Circle. 809 pages. $4.50

Excursions into Practical Composition

By Garland Greever

This new text for freshman courses in English composition contains 136 theme-length writings illustrating the practical aspects of written communication, supplemented by instructive and analytical introductions, and arranged progressively to lead the student along the path to maturity in written expression. The text is divided into three parts: Functional Writing—Communication; Skillful Writing—Technique; and Imaginative Writing—Art. Over 500 inciting topics are suggested for the students to develop in the manner of the models. 388 pages.

HENRI RODDIER, in an eight-page review article in MP, XLVIII (May 1951), 263-270, said: "... an excellent book and in many ways an illuminating study of a hitherto scantily explored field of research. . . . The most conspicuous feature . . . is . . . the apparently uncanny familiarity of its author with the minor novelists of the 18th century. He seems to write about them as if they were old friends . . . [in a] congenial, humorous way of characterizing authors and books . . . the book is literally teeming with out-of-the-way references which will often prove invaluable . . . as this is the most complete work that has ever been published on the matter, nobody who will henceforth want to study pre-Romanticism can dispense with it." THE THEATRE DICTIONARY

Limited Edition

British and American Terms in the Drama, Opera & Ballet

by Wilfred Granville

The technical, colloquial, and slang speech current in the theatre, covering every branch of the art, from the legitimate stage to vaudeville, and road shows. . . . As actor, stage director, and producer Mr. Granville speaks from first-hand knowledge of his subject. A specialist in glossaries, he has treated theatre speech in a readable, unacademic way, with full etymologies of words and phrases. As a record of how actors, directors, managers, and stage hands speak, this book will be of great value to all theatre-lovers.

"THE THEATRE DICTIONARY is an invaluable source book for anyone on stage—or off it—or on the mere fringes of the theatrical world. More than a work of reference, it is a volume which combines information and entertainment. It wears its erudition lightly; the research is precise but, for the casual reader, painless; the facts are forthright but fascinating. Altogether, it is a book for anyone who has ever been stagestruck, anyone who has ever succumbed to the theatre's magic blend of realism and illusion—in short, for everyone."—Louis Untermeyer

"I was most interested in this dictionary and had all the delight of discovery in the most unexpected places, such as the origin of 'to stuff.' There is no doubt that the author has rescued derivations which in a few years might well have disappeared into oblivion."—Christopher Fry

"In The Theatre Dictionary, Wilfred Granville, author of the delightful Dictionary of Sea Terms of the 20th Century, has achieved a very readable book on entertaining and an extremely useful piece of work. He writes from a rich, personal, first-hand knowledge of the stage; and, as always, he writes agreeably. The book is not only informative but instructive. Indeed, one might—without fear of contradiction—go so far as to say that it should appeal to everyone connected with the theatre and to everyone interested in it."—Eric Partridge

Announcing

CONFERENCES OF SCHOLARS

at the 1952 Meeting

THE Program Committee will make available at the 1952 Annual Meeting a number of small conference rooms for scholarly discussion of announced topics. These rooms will be allocated to interested members of the Association under the following conditions:

1. A petition signed by seven or more members, stating the topic and aim of the conference, and designating a discussion leader, must be sent to reach the Secretary of the Association not later than October 15.
 2. Legitimate petitions will be honored in the order of their receipt and up to the limit of available accommodations. The normal conference period will be one hour and a half. Requests for specific periods should include several periods in the order of preference.
 3. The conference rooms to be made available will accommodate no more than twenty-five or thirty-five persons, and it will be the responsibility of the discussion leader to refuse admission to additional persons.
 4. The topic, place, and leader of the conference will be named in the printed Program. If the conference is being held by invitation only, this fact will also be stated. Otherwise, it will be the responsibility of the discussion leader to handle requests for admission; the Program will explain that interested persons should write to him, and that he will grant requests for admission up to the limit of accommodations.
 5. Only sharply defined topics, supported by explanations of the purposes of the conference, will be honored.
 6. Conference rooms will be allocated with the understanding that the object of the meetings is not the reading of papers. On the other hand, the mimeographing and advance circulation of papers or reports will be within the spirit of the arrangement.
 7. Brief reports on the conferences, if submitted promptly to the Secretary of the Association, will be published in the annual Proceedings; but no reports are required.
 8. Official recognition of each conference is for one year only. If a group wishes to renew its discussion in 1953, it may again petition for accommodation.
