OXFORD BOOKS FOR STUDENTS

Cases on Private International Law

J. H. C. MORRIS

The fourth edition of this important book has been radically revised and covers four new statutes and twelve new cases, including a full report of the revolutionary decision of the House of Lords in Indyka v. Indyka (1967) and of the New York Court of Appeals in Babcock v. Jackson (1963). The Notes are a feature of the book, since they seek to stimulate as well as to inform, by asking questions as well as providing information. They have been thoroughly revised, and those on recognition of foreign divorces and on torts have been completely rewritten. J. H. C. Morris is a Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford.
Fourth edition 560pp 65/- net

Punishment and Responsibility

Essays in the Philosophy of Law H. L. A. HART

Some of these essays are concerned with the analysis of specific psychological conditions of responsibility, such as intention, 'acts of will,' and negligence, or of the general idea of responsibility and retribution; other essays are concerned with the justification of theories which restrict liability to punishment by reference to psychological conditions, or with newer theories which would eliminate such restrictions. The author is Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford.
282pp 28/- net, paper covers 14/- net

Administrative Law H. W. R. WADE

Since this textbook was first published six years ago there have been important developments in administrative law, much of which is judge-made. The central parts of the book have therefore been extensively rewritten. As before, it attempts to clarify the outlines of a subject which is insufficiently recognized as a single body of law. The principles of judicial control, natural justice, and tribunals and inquiries are given special prominence. The author is Professor of English Law in the University of Oxford. Second edition 356pp 30/- net
Clarendon Law Series

Principles of Public International Law

IAN BROWNLIE

A treatment of Public International Law which emphasizes the technical aspects and major issues of legal principle. It is intended to provide a convenient work of reference for practitioners and a textbook suitable for both first degree courses and postgraduate work. '... a work which may well come into use as a regular university legal textbook...' Law Quarterly Review

Studies in Australian Federation

Australian Federalism in the Courts

GEOFFREY SAWER

This lucid account of Australian constitutional law discusses how the Federal Constitution of 1901 has been applied by the courts, and describes the conflicts and changes of view among the judges. The two appendices give the text of the Constitution, and notes on the principal decisions about affirmative powers.

Imprisonment in Medieval England

RALPH B. PUGH

This first study of imprisonment in England from pre-Conquest times to the reign of Henry VIII investigates a neglected area of social and administrative history. Mr. Pugh describes the uses of imprisonment and the location, types, custody and appearance of medieval prisons. He corrects prevailing misconceptions about their functions and administration, and the treatment of prisoners. He traces the growth of imprisonment for debt, and devotes several chapters to escaping and its consequences, and the trial of suspected felons.

By showing how the English prison system evolved, this book places in better perspective the conditions which prison reformers have tried to relieve.

Essays in Legal Philosophy

Edited by ROBERT S. SUMMERS

The contributors are lawyers interested in philosophy and philosophers interested in law. In no sense would they regard themselves as forming a school, though they do represent a new and professional academic discipline which is flourishing on both sides of the Atlantic.

The Nature of Legal Argument

O. C. JENSEN

The author claims that the nature of legal argument has been misrepresented in juristic writings, and that therefore there is a need for a re-examination from a new standpoint of the kind of concepts, rules and methods of reasoning used in deciding legal cases.

Justice in the Welfare State

HARRY STREET

Solicitor of the Supreme Court, Professor of English Law in the University of Manchester

The State regulates our lives more than ever before: we look to it to provide us with security and assistance in very many forms and this is what is meant by the Welfare State. But its development has greatly increased the potential area of dispute between Government and citizen and it is highly important that each and every one of us should be dealt with justly in such disputes. So the aim of this book is to see whether, in fact and in practice, the citizen is getting justice in the Welfare State.

An Introduction to Legal Systems

EDITED BY

J. DUNCAN M. DERRETT, D.C.L.(Oxon)

of Gray's Inn, Barrister-at-Law.

In this book six specialists, under the editorship of Dr. J. Duncan M. Derrett, who contributes one of the sections, explain the leading characteristics of the major historic legal systems. Readable, detailed, but also succinct, each outline presents an assimilable and interesting account of the sources and development of the system concerned, its basic concepts of law and jurisprudence, and its capacity for growth and change in reaction to social and economic conditions, and geographic spread.

JOHN E. C. BRIERLEY

Docteur de l'Université de Paris (Droit) of the Quebec Bar, Assistant Professor, Faculty of Law, McGill University.

This is a translation, adapted in the text, notes and bibliography, of Les Grands Systemes de Droit Contemporains by Professor René David. The second, revised and enlarged, French edition of this modern classic forms the basis of the present work. Wide ranging in coverage, always authoritative, interesting and readable, this book provides the historical and philosophical background to the four main systems of law in use today.

Cross and Jones' Introduction to Criminal Law—Sixth Edition 1968

By Rupert Cross, F.B.A., D.C.L., Solicitor, Vinerian Professor of English Law in the University of Oxford and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford and Philip Asterley Jones, LL.B., Solicitor, Principal Lecturer in Law at the City of Birmingham College of Commerce.

The Sixth Edition of this well-known book, described by reviewers in its last edition as "the best student text-book on criminal law", has been called for by the many changes in the law which have arisen since the previous edition appeared in 1964. It takes account of the new Theft Act and incorporates the Criminal Law and Criminal Justice Acts of 1967.
