EULAU to Edit Political Behavior Journal

Beginning with volume 2, the journal Political Behavior, published by Agathon Press of New York, will be edited by Heinz Eulau of Stanford University. Theoretically thoughtful but empirically grounded articles dealing with the political behavior of individuals, groups, organizations or institutions, whether approached in a psychological or sociological perspective, are welcome.

To assure prompt attention and review, manuscripts should be typed double-spaced throughout and follow, in style and format of references, the American Political Science Review. Three copies of the manuscript should be submitted. A cover page should include title, author's name and affiliation, academic rank and mailing address. The manuscript should be accompanied by an abstract of 125 words. Tables should be typed on separate pages. All charts or graphs must be suitable for reproduction.

Manuscripts should be sent to Professor Heinz Eulau, Department of Political Science, Stanford University, Stanford, California 94305.

WOODROW WILSON Essay Anthology

The 1980s will mark the 100th anniversary of Woodrow Wilson's article, "The Study of Public Administration." Jack Rabin and James S. Bowman are preparing an anthology of original essays in recognition of this anniversary.

The purpose of the collection of original essays will be to examine the impact of the Wilsonian dichotomy on the principal subfields of public administration as they have evolved since the 1880s. These subfields include, but are not limited to, (1) organization theory, (2) administrative law, (3) budgeting, (4) personnel management, (5) administrative responsibility, (6) policy formulation, (7) scope and methods, and (8) the bureaucratic state.

Proposals for the 35-50 page articles are welcome from knowledgeable people specializing in these areas. Individuals are invited to send a one-page proposal and brief, tentative outline of their papers to: Jack Rabin, Department of Government, Auburn University at Montgomery, Montgomery, Alabama 36117; or James S. Bowman, Department of Political Science, University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming 82071.

Proposals must be received no later than November 15, 1980. Complete manuscripts will be due in the fall of 1981. They will then be refereed. Selected contributions will be published by a major book company in 1982.

LSE Department of Government M.S. in Political Philosophy

A new one-year M.Sc. in political philosophy will be established at the London School of Economics in the 1980-81 session. It is designed to explore in detail substantive problems in political philosophy and the approach will be both historical and analytical. The core of the course will consist of two small seminars: the first will explore the concept of justice in Greek political philosophy, and the second, the concepts of freedom and equality in modern political philosophy. Two additional parts of the syllabus will be selected from: (a) a choice of texts from authors such as Marsilius, Machiavelli, Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau, Hegel and J. S. Mill; or (b) a 10,000-word essay; or (c) an approved paper from another politics M.Sc.

The course is designed to enable students who have studied political philosophy or the history of political thought at undergraduate level to pursue in depth for a limited period several important aspects of these subjects. It will be an especially useful preparation for prospective research students as undergraduate courses in politics rarely include much specialization in political ideas. The concentration of staff who teach political thought at L.S.E. is unrivalled, and library facilities both at the School's new library and nearby are excellent.

For further information please write to: The Secretary of the Graduate School, The London School of Economics and Political Science, Houghton Street, London WC2A 2AE; or to Dr. F. Rosen, Course Organizer, Government Department, L.S.E.

SOCIAL MOVEMENTS Series Call

Twayne Publishers, a division of G.K. Hall & Co., Boston, announces a new series of books on Social Movements: Past and Present. Movements to be covered in the series include abolitionism, civil rights, conservation, planned parenthood, and rights for the elderly. The editor, Professor Irwin T. Sanders, would welcome additional suggestions for movements to include and recommendations for those competent to write a volume about a given movement for the general reading public. Address suggestions to the editor at the Department of Sociology, Boston University, 100 Cummington Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02215.

1979 Education for PUBLIC SERVICE

Volume

The Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs of Syracuse University has initiated a new series, Education for Public Service. The first volume is now available for $6, pre-paid, from the Office of the Dean, Maxwell School, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York 13210. The series is edited by Guthrie S. Birkhead, Dean of the Maxwell School, and James D. Carroll, Director of the Advanced Study Program at the Brookings Institution and former head of the Public Administration Program at the Maxwell School. The 1979 volume has an introduction by Dwight Waldo, "Trends and Issues in Education for Public Administration," and includes chapters such as "Technological Education for Public Service" by Richard H. Longshore; "Graduate and Undergraduate Programs in Public Administration" by Eleanor V. Laudicina, and "The Critique of Poor Reason: Using Literature to Teach Analysts" by Martin H. Krieger.

The FRENCH-AMERICAN Foundation

The establishment of the first Chair in American Civilization at a French university has been announced by the French-American Foundation, whose purpose is the strengthening of ties between France and the United States.

The Chair, created to meet the rising demand from French scholars and doctoral students for access to specialists in American studies, will be situated in Paris at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, France's leading institution of higher learning in the social sciences. Beginning in the autumn of 1980, the Chair will be occupied by an American scholar in the social sciences to be selected by an academic committee headed by Professor Stanley Hoffmann of Harvard, with the agreement of the faculty of the EHESS.

Under the program, a different American professor will occupy the Chair each year for the next three academic years. These chairholders will be drawn from varying disciplines such as economics, history, and political science. At the end of 1982, the Chair will be expanded to become The Center of American Civilization at EHESS with additional courses offered by Americanists from other faculties in the French university system.

In recognition of the urgent need for a center in France where comprehensive and up-to-date knowledge about the United States will be presented on a continuing basis by American authorities in their fields, the French government plans to match the American program by creating a second Chair at EHESS in 1980. It has also been proposed that a major Documentation Center be developed in Paris to support the Chair and Center.

The French-American Foundation, a non-profit operating foundation, and its counterpart in Paris, the Fondation Franco-Americaine, were organized in 1976 to carry out a new program of concrete projects in education, communication, and other fields aimed at bringing professional groups and young leaders in both countries closer together. The two foundations now spend over half a million dollars each year for this purpose.

For further information, contact: Constance Jewett, Executive Director, The French-American Foundation, 680 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10021.

ALTERNATIVE FUTURES Paper Call

The Winter 1981 issue of Alternative Futures: The Journal of Utopian Thinking will be devoted to the topic "Political Vision and the Future of Governance." Contributed papers should consider the content and implications of visions of governance in utopian and futurist literature, speculate on the future of politics or describe and consider possible and preferred forms and processes of governance in the future. Papers may take any position or approach and may represent any discipline, so long as they address the general theme.

Individuals interested in preparing a contribution for this special issue should send a one-page prospectus to the guest editors as soon as possible. Individuals with a manuscript available for review should submit it no later than August 15, 1980.

Inquiries and submissions should be made to the guest editors, David E. Ingersoll and Daniel Rich, Department of Political Science, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

Georgetown University

BOWEN INTELLIGENCE, SECURITY and COVERT ACTIVITIES Collection

The Georgetown University Library has received on deposit from Colonel Russell J. Bowen a collection of more than 3,800 books on intelligence, espionage, covert activities, and national security. This collection has been placed in the Special Collections Department of the Joseph Mark Lauinger Memorial Library on the Georgetown University campus and will be identified as the "Russell J. Bowen Collection on Intelligence, Security and Covert Activities."

Colonel Bowen deposited this collection in the Georgetown Library because of his strong desire to have it used for the advancement of research, writing, and education pertaining to intelligence. The Bowen Collection will be available for use by scholars, researchers, and students in accordance with Georgetown University Library policies and procedures. The National Intelligence Study Center, directed by Dr. Ray S. Cline, is providing financial assistance for preparation and publication of a catalog which will facilitate access to and utilization of the collection.

The Bowen Collection includes books and documents of the United States, England,

The Profession

France, Germany, Japan, USSR, and other countries. The scope of the collection extends over several hundred years, and includes early wars and conflicts in Europe, the American Revolutionary era, the Civil War in the United States, the World Wars and other events. Intelligence and espionage activities during World War II, the Cold War, and recent events are extensively documented in this collection. The Bowen Collection may be the largest body of published intelligence material in any university library.

Information about the Bowen Collection may be obtained from the Georgetown University Special Collections librarian, George M. Baringer.

PI SIGMA ALPHA Installations

Several new chapters of Pi Sigma Alpha, the Political Science Honor Society, have recently been installed. They are: Rider College (Lawrenceville, New Jersey), Kappa Alpha Chapter; Oregon State University, Kappa Gamma Chapter; the U.S. Naval Academy, Kappa Epsilon Chapter; University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown, Kappa Beta Chapter; and University of North Carolina at Wilmington, Kappa Delta Chapter. For information on Pi Sigma Alpha, write to Dr. Howard Penniman, Director, Pi Sigma Alpha, Bureau of Governmental Research, University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland 20742.

Center for the Study of COMMUNICATIONS POLICY

The John and Mary Markle Foundation has awarded a three-year, $450,000 grant to the Institute of Policy Sciences and Public Affairs for the continued support of a Center for the Study of Communications Policy. The program, to be directed by James David Barber, James B. Duke Professor of Political Science and Public Policy Studies, will attempt to equip journalists with the intellectual depth, self-conscious professionalism and standards of excellence needed to make the judgments our society now calls upon them to make. The program is aimed not at teaching journalism "technique," but rather will concentrate on an interdisciplinary, integrated program of substantive instruction and research, including the study of social journalism. It is expected that participants who enter the program will come equipped with academic expertise in various of the social science disciplines relevant to the study of communications policy.

The grant will focus on the creation of a Program for Contemporary Social Journalism and will stress curriculum development and research. It is also expected that several additional courses in journalism and communications policy will be developed at the Institute as well as internships to complement the courses.

Further, several intensive summer courses for practicing journalists will be offered in substantive disciplines that are directly related to the work of the participating journalists.

BRITISH POLITICS Group Register

The British Politics Group intends to issue the 4th edition of its Register of Current Research in early 1981. The Research Register lists ongoing work on any aspect of British politics. Scholars who are not members of the Group but who wish to be included in the Register should contact William D. Muller, Editor, BPG Research Register, c/o Political Science Department, SUNY, Fredonia, New York 14063 by early fall, 1980. Copies of the Register will be sent to members of the British Politics Group in early 1981. Non-members may purchase a copy from Jorgen Rasmussen, Executive Secretary, BPG, c/o Political Science Department, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa 50011.

APQ VOTER TURNOUT Issue

American Politics Quarterly invites manuscripts for a special issue on Voter Turnout tentatively scheduled for April, 1981. Although manuscripts may be submitted as late as September 15, 1980, the early receipt of papers is encouraged since they will be subjected to the normal review process, editorial decisions are likely to be made sequentially, and the production/publication schedule is constrained to facilitate timely appearance. The topic is broadly defined to include empirical work of theoretical significance in the American setting across all levels of analysis and types of elections; this includes a wide range of causes and consequences, trend analyses, and interpretations of implications for the political system. Prospective authors should note the conventional instructions in the Quarterly, including those associated with length and style, and the requirement for four (4) copies, including abstracts and a biographical statement. Copies should be submitted to: Samuel A. Kirkpatrick, Editor, American Politics Quarterly, Department of Political Science, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

CARNEGIE-MELLON Public Policy and Applied Social Science Research Program

The Department of Social Science, Carnegie-Mellon University, a multi-disciplinary department emphasizing research on organizations and public policy, has announced a new post-doctoral program in public policy and applied social science research. Traineeships will be awarded to social scientists who plan to carry out problem oriented and analytic policy research as well as theoretically relevant research in nonacademic or academic settings. During a two-year period trainees will extend methodological skills, conduct research with faculty and have opportunities to work on policy projects in Washington, D.C. Applicants should have a strong disciplinary background in any social or behavioral science, research productivity, and interest in working on such interdisciplinary research topics as foreign or domestic policy decision making, administrative behavior in public organizations, development of social programs, political behavior and public policy, behavioral economics. Carnegie-Mellon University is an equal opportunity employer and applications from minorities and women are particularly welcome. Applicants should send a letter and vita with references to: Professor Sara B. Kiesler, Department of Social Science, Carnegie-Mellon University, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15213.

AAAS Project on HEW Review Panels

Under a contract from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the AAAS Office of Opportunities in Science (OOS) has recently begun a project to facilitate the inclusion of women, minority and handicapped scientists and other professionals on the advisory and review panels within HEW. This technical assistance project will involve four major components: (1) the solicitation of resumes from minority, women and handicapped scientists for inclusion in the NIH computerized registry; (2) workshop sessions for agency personnel having responsibility for identifying and recruiting individuals for committees on how to locate minority, women and handicapped scientists; (3) direct assistance in identifying persons for consideration for specific panels where vacancies occur during the project; and (4) the development of a guide for future use on how to identify and recruit minority, women and handicapped scientists.

The office would like to encourage women, minority and handicapped scientists who are either working or trained in the natural or social sciences (including social work, health professions and clinical fields), especially those actively involved in research to submit their resumes. The National Institutes of Health have been involved in a direct effort to obtain resumes from minority, women and handicapped scientists. If individuals have received a request directly from NIH for reviewer information, the AAAS would encourage you to respond to them; otherwise please send all information to c/o Karen Ehrlich, Technical Assistance Project, AAAS Office of Opportunities in Science, 1776 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036; telephone (202) 467-5438.

CIA Academic Research Proposals

The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency is seeking preliminary proposals from individual scholars for unclassified research on the consequences of political and social change. Proposals of various sorts are encouraged, including analyses of individual countries, studies employing quantitative indicators across countries, and conceptual analyses which attempt to delimit the most significant dimensions of political change. The proposed research should be described briefly in a 3-5 page prospectus that outlines the basic problem and approach, the resources to be employed, the related expenses to be incurred, and a rough estimate of the expected total cost. Expenses might include salary, travel, acquisition of data, and research assistance. The prospectus should be accompanied by a resume summarizing the individual's qualifications and experience for undertaking the proposed task. There are no restrictions on the project's beginning date of its duration. Each prospectus will be evaluated in terms of its relevance to current Agency needs, the merit of the proposal, and the qualifications of the individual or individuals involved. Those individuals whose responses are evaluated favorably will be asked to submit a more detailed proposal. While receipt of materials is acknowledged, they will not be returned. Please send prospectus to: Central Intelligence Agency, Department A, Room 821-A, P.O. Box 1925, Washington, D.C. 20013. Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

SSRC SURVEY Archive Catalog

The United Kingdom Social Science Research Council has produced an up-to-date Data Catalogue which is now available for £19.50 ($42.84) per copy.

The Data Catalogue is structured to make access to relevant information as easy as possible. The entries are divided into over 100 subject categories with extensive cross-referencing. An Abbreviated Guide precedes the main text, containing a shorter description of each study, to allow users to identify material of interest as rapidly as possible. It is organized according to the same subject categories as the main guide. Five indices are provided as a further aid in the selection of relevant material: by title, by depositor, by survey number, by geographical region, and by population. Updates to the Guide will be available in the future.

For copies write to SSRC Survey Archive, University of Essex, Wivenhoe Park, Colchester, Essex C043SQ, United Kingdom.

Center for the Study of MIDDLE-SIZE CITIES

The Center for the Study of Middle-Size Cities at Sangamon State University, which conducts the Local Government Internship Program, has announced the 1980-81 program. The program, which begins in October, provides outstanding students an opportunity to pursue graduate studies and research while observing and becoming actively involved with the organizations. For further information on the program, write to Dr. Phillip Gregg, Director, Local Government Internship Program, Center for the Study of Middle-Size Cities, Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois 62708, or telephone (800) 252-8533 or (217) 786-6310.

The Profession

The Center also has graduate assistantships in applied urban policy research. For information on these, please contact Dr. John W. Foley, Director, Center for the Study of Middle-Size Cities, Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois 62708; telephone (800) 252-8533 or (217) 786-6571.

Washington Center for LEARNING ALTERNATIVES: Offerings

The Washington Center for Learning Alternatives (WCLA), a national internship and symposia center based in Washington, D.C., is offering unique educational opportunities for faculty and students this August.

Just prior to the APSA Convention (August 25-27), WCLA will conduct its National Affiliates Conference. The conference will focus on WCLA's full-time internship program: administering the internship program on the home campus, selecting and placing interns, supervising and evaluating intern performance, WCLA academic seminars, financial aid and scholarships, and awarding academic credit. The 2½-day conference is designed for faculty and administrators who are interested in offering quality Washington-based internships to their students. Official WCLA Affiliated Institutional Liaisons and other interested parties are welcome to attend.

Between August 17-29, the WCLA Symposium Program will conduct a series of two-week symposia on national policy making for undergraduate and graduate students. The specific programs are: (a) U.S. Foreign Policy: A Critical Analysis from an International Perspective, and (b) Business and Government in a Mixed Economy: Forecasting and Managing Political, Regulatory and Legislative Effects on the Private Sector. Included among the distinguished faculty for these programs are Dr. Andrew Gyorgy, Dr. Bernard Reich and Dr. Charles Levine.

For more information on the WCLA National Affiliates Conference and the Washington FORUM '80 programs, contact: Elizabeth Downes, Executive Director, Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, 1705 DeSales Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036; telephone (202) 659-8510.

NORC Compendium

The General Social Survey staff at the National Opinion Research Center has recently compiled A Compendium of Trends on General Social Survey Questions. This 260-page report contains the marginal trends for over 300 items which appear on the GSSs. Data are included not only from the GSSs but also from prior surveys that originated questions later adopted by the GSS. The Compendium gives the frequencies for all items, applies trend models to the raw figures, contains an introduction that explains and summarizes the contents, and has a subject index. The report can be ordered for $7.50 (postage included) from Patrick Bova, NORC Library, National Opinion Research Center, University of Chicago, 6030 So. Ellis Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60637.

LARRY PETTIT Congressional Candidacy

Larry Pettit, recently head of the Montana University System, has announced his candidacy for U.S. Representative from Montana's second (Eastern) congressional district.

Pettit, a political scientist and Democrat, has had Capitol Hill work experience, and once worked at Congressional liaison for the American Council on Education.

Pettit's campaign director is Celinda Lake, a doctoral candidate at the University of Michigan. Pettit and Lake are interested in providing research access to fellow political scientists. They can be reached at Box 1716, Billings, Montana 59103; telephone (406) 252-4114.

UK POLITICS Bibliography

The first bibliography that treats the United Kingdom as a 'multi-national' state has been published by the Centre for the Study of Public Policy at the University of Strathclyde. Laurence Pollock and Ian McAllister are the authors of A Bibliography of United Kingdom Politics: Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The bibliography lists nearly 2,000 entries to studies of politics in the non-English parts of the United Kingdom since 1945. It is particularly rich in references to unpublished papers presented at academic conferences or circulated privately. There are also entries to writings that compare parts of the United Kingdom with each other, to articles about the whole of the United Kingdom (not just Westminster-oriented politics), and to the Irish dimension in United Kingdom politics.

The volume appears under the aegis of the Political Studies Association Work Group on United Kingdom Politics (Richard Rose, Convenor; Peter Madgwick, Co-Convenor) and was supported by the Nuffield Foundation and the Social Science Research Council. It was compiled by computer, for ease in correcting and updating. It is available at £3.50 (£4.00 outside the United Kingdom) from the Centre for the Study of Public Policy, University of Strathclyde, 16 Richmond Street, Glasgow, G1 1XQ.

Scholars Washington WORKPLACE

The WorkPlace, a unique service operation for part-time free-lance professionals in Washington, D.C., is now in its fourth year of operation. It provides office space plus a wide range of research support activities, as well as such conventional office services as xeroxing, secretarial help, mail drop, answering services, conference room and desk and phone use.

To maximize its service and minimize its charges, the use of this facility is available to out-of-towners who make infrequent but regular working business visits to Washington, as well as scholars coming to the city for research or funding purposes.

The WorkPlace is located at 1302 18th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. The telephone number is (202) 223-6274. For further information write to the Directors of the Center, Ms. Jean Levin or Ms. Beverly Nadel.
