

Editorial

THE tenth issue of the Bulletin appears in a completely new typographic form, which I am sure will be welcomed by all members of the Hegel Society of Great Britain and other readers of the Bulletin. The print was set by the LASERCOMP method, with the help and on the equipment of the Oxford University Computing Service. The new production method, combined with the inability of the Editor to grasp computer language and other intricacies of the method, has alas! resulted in an inordinate delay for which he sincerely apologizes. It is hoped that this will be avoided in the future, especially as the Editor will be helped by a newly appointed Assistant Editor (Robert Bernasconi, Essex University).
