

Session III: Origins and Predecessors of Modern United States Radical Political Economy

Presiding: Howard J. Sherman, University of California-Riverside

- a. Marx, Veblen and Modern Radical Economics
E.K. Hunt, University of Utah
- b. Radical Economic Thought in the American Labor Movement
Daniel R. Fusfeld, University of Michigan
- c. The Origins of Radical Economics in the United States
Herbert Gintis, University of Massachusetts-Amherst

Discussants:

Warren J. Samuels, Michigan State University
Robert L. Heilbroner, New School of Social Research
John B. David, Michigan State University

The program was arranged by John P. Henderson, Vice President, HES

1985 Conference - Announcement and Call for Papers

The 1985 Conference of the History of Economics Society will be held on May 20, 21, and 22 at George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia. The conference organizer is Professor A.W. "Bob" Coats, President-elect of HES. Anyone interested in presenting a paper should write to him at the Department of Economics, Duke University, Durham, N.C. 27706, giving a brief title and description. (As he will be in England from Sept. 1 to Jan. 4, 1985, he can be contacted more quickly in that period at: The Orchards, Church Lane, Attenborough, Notts, NG96AL England)

As usual, papers will be welcome on any aspect of the history of economic thought. However, as 1985 marks the centenary of the American Economic Association papers on American topics, including the influence of American economists and economic thought broad, will be especially appropriate.

Also, if suitable material is forthcoming, there will be one or two sessions of papers by graduate students who are about to complete, or who have just completed their theses. Please submit suitable names as soon as possible.

Accommodations and meetings will be on the campus at George Mason, which is approximately 15 miles from Washington National and Dulles International Airports. Limousine and/or special bus transport will be provided for those who register and notify the organizers of their arrival times beforehand. Information on these matters will be circulated after registration. Professor Karen Vaughn, Chairman of the Economics Department at George Mason, will act as liason between the conference organizer and those in charge of local arrangements.

Further information and registration forms will be mailed to members early in the year.