Locked in Place

State-Building and Late Industrialization in India
Vivek Chibber

Why were some countries able to build “developmental states” in the decades after World War II while others were not? Through a richly detailed examination of India’s experience, Locked in Place argues that the critical factor was the reaction of domestic capitalists to the state-building project.

Vivek Chibber contrasts India’s experience with the success of a similar program of state-building in Korea and describes the different reactions of Indian and Korean capitalists as rational responses to the distinct development models adopted in each country.

The Power of Denial

Buddhism, Purity, and Gender
Bernard Faure

In The Power of Denial, Bernard Faure boldly asks: does Buddhism offer women liberation or limitation? Continuing the innovative exploration of sexuality in Buddhism he began in The Red Thread, here he moves from his earlier focus on male monastic sexuality to Buddhist conceptions of women and constructions of gender.

“Well organized and very well written, Faure’s book is unique. It will certainly stir up controversy in Buddhist studies and in American Buddhism. The style is perfect: brief, punchy, and to the point.”

—Steven Collins, University of Chicago

Korean Endgame

A Strategy for Reunification and U.S. Disengagement
Selig S. Harrison

“Korean Endgame is the best analysis I have seen of the difficult policy choices facing the United States in Korea. Selig Harrison covers all the key issues accurately and thoroughly, bringing into perspective the complicated relationships among North Korea, South Korea, and the United States.”—Jimmy Carter
