Cover: Fasciola hepatica (liver fluke) egg from a late medieval-period cesspit at Leiden, the Netherlands. Light microscopy and enzyme-linked immunosorbent assays (ELISA) have been used to identify a range of other parasites from the site, including whipworm and roundworm. Such parasites are associated with the houses of all the various social groups sampled. The presence of Fasciola hepatica suggests the consumption of infected ruminant livers. For more information, see 'Intestinal parasite infection and sanitation in medieval Leiden, the Low Countries' by Sophie Rabinow, Tianyi Wang, Roos van Oosten, Yolande Meijer & Piers D. Mitchell in this issue. Photograph © Sophie Rabinow.
