

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

PATRICIA SEED is Associate Professor of History at Rice University. She is currently finishing a second book entitled The Authority of Empire, a critical examination of the rhetoric of political legitimacy in the Spanish, Portuguese, English, French, and Dutch overseas empires of the sixteenth century. The article in this issue will be part of that book.

JOHN A. BOOTH is Regents' Professor of Political Science at the University of North Texas. He is author of The End and the Beginning: The Nicaraguan Revolution, coauthor of Understanding Central America, coeditor of Elections and Democracy in Central America and of the first and second volumes of Political Participation in Latin America, and has contributed to a number of scholarly journals and anthologies on Latin America. He currently serves on the editorial board of LARR.

NORA HAMILTON is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Southern California. The author of The Limits of State Autonomy: Post-Revolutionary Mexico and coeditor of Crisis in Central America: Regional Dynamics and U.S. Policy in the 1980s, she is currently conducting research on alternative economic strategies for Central America. She and Norma Chinchilla are studying Central American migration and Central Americans living in Los Angeles.

NORMA STOLTZ CHINCHILLA is Professor of Women's Studies and Sociology at California State University, Long Beach. She is preparing a book on Guatemalan women and the movement for social change in addition to her joint research project with Nora Hamilton on Central American immigration to Los Angeles.

LESLIE ANDERSON is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Colorado. Her research focuses on theories of peasant political action, and she has published several articles on peasant politics. To date, her fieldwork has centered on the peasantry in Central America. She is currently completing a book that proposes a new, ecological theory of peasant political action.

RICHARD W. SLATTA is Professor of History and a graduate administrator at North Carolina State at Raleigh. He is the author of Cowboys of the Americas and Gauchos and the Vanishing Frontier and the editor of Bandidos: The Varieties of Latin American Banditry.

PETER SINGELMANN is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Missouri–Kansas City. His work covers Latin American peasant movements, rural class relations, social banditry, the Mexican sugar industry, and general social theory.

CHRISTOPHER BIRKBECK is Associate Professor of Criminology at the Universidad de Los Andes in Mérida, Venezuela. His principal research interest concerns crime and social control in Venezuela.

GILBERT M. JOSEPH, Professor of History at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, wrote Revolution from Without: Yucatán, Mexico, and the United States, 1880–1924 and Rediscovering the Past at Mexico's Periphery. He coedited Land, Labor, and Capital in Modern Yucatán: Essays in Regional History and Political Economy. He and Allen Wells are currently writing a book that examines structures of domination and forms of rural protest in southeastern Mexico during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

STEPHEN S. GOLUB, Associate Professor of Economics at Swarthmore College, completed this review essay while he was visiting Yale University. He has published a number of articles on international finance and has worked at the Federal Reserve Board, the U. S. Department of the Treasury, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, and the World Bank.

MICHAEL W. FOLEY is Assistant Professor of Politics at the Catholic University of America. He has written on peasant mobilization in contemporary Mexico and is currently studying the politics of export promotion in Mexico, Chile, and Costa Rica.

MARIFELI PEREZ-STABLE is Associate Professor of Sociology at the State University of New York, College at Old Westbury. She recently completed a manuscript on Cuban nationalism and the struggle for social justice and is working on a study of the Cuban bourgeoisie in the twentieth century.

HAZEL SMITH teaches "foreign policy analysis" in the Department of International Relations at the London School of Economics, where she is a research student. She has traveled frequently to Nicaragua and has written several articles about the Atlantic Coast region. Her forthcoming book on state, society, and the revolution in Nicaragua will be published by Pluto Press.

FRANCISCO JAVIER CEVALLOS is Associate Professor of Spanish at the University of Massachusetts. He has published Juan Bautista Aguirre y el barroco colonial (Madrid: Edi-6, 1983), Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz: antología lírica (Salamanca: Clásicos Almar, 1989), and numerous articles on colonial and contemporary Latin American literature.