

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

KEVIN J. DELANEY received his Ph.D. from State University of New York at Stony Brook. He is currently Assistant Professor of Sociology at Temple University. His research focuses on developing an interorganizational approach to the study of business bankruptcy.

ROBERT DINGWALL is Research Fellow at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, University of Oxford. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Aberdeen and has written widely about occupations, organizations, and interaction in health care and in the legal system. Apart from his work on divorce mediation, he is currently also involved in studies of medical negligence and of litigation arising from occupational exposures to asbestos.

DAVID GREATBATCH is Research Associate at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, University of Oxford. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Warwick and is co-author of The News Interview: Studies in the History and Dynamics of a Social Form and Figures of Speech: Studies in Political Communication (both forthcoming).

THOMAS MARVELL, a lawyer-sociologist, is Director of Justec Research in Williamsburg, Virginia, which conducts econometric analysis of criminal and civil justice issues. He is currently studying summary procedures in appellate courts and the impact of state sentencing reforms.

JESSICA PEARSON is Director of the Center for Policy Research, an independent non-profit research corporation in Denver, Colorado. Her research interests include child custody, divorce mediation, child protection, case processing, and child support. Her recent work on these topics has been published in Law and Policy, Family Law Quarterly, and Justice System Journal.

NANCY THOENNES is Associate Director of the Center for Policy Research. She has conducted studies and published articles on divorce mediation, child protection, child support, and welfare reform.

PATRICIA TJADEN is a Research Associate with the Center for Policy Research. In addition to her work on child support, she has published articles on sexual abuse allegations, midwifery, and female offenders.

KIRK R. WILLIAMS is Associate Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology and a research associate in the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire. He has published articles on inequality, violence, and social control and is currently directing a national panel study of deterrence and violence between intimate partners, funded by the National Science Foundation.

RICHARD HAWKINS is Associate Professor of Sociology at Southern Methodist University and a research fellow at the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire. In addition to work on deterrence processes, he has recently completed a book, American Prison Systems: Punishment and Justice.

ROBERT E. WORDEN holds a Ph.D. in political science from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and is currently an Assistant Professor in the School of Criminal Justice, Michigan State University. Besides his continuing research on police decisionmaking and behavior, he is collaborating with Tim Bynum on a study of the impacts of street-level drug enforcement.