

Princeton

UNIVERSITY PRESS

Naval Wars in the Levant, 1559–1853

By R. C. ANDERSON. The well-known British historian, author of the authoritative Naval Wars of the Baltic, presents here an account of the wars of the Black Sea and the Eastern Mediterranean, from about the time of the Battle of Lepanto to the introduction of steam in the middle of the 19th century. Mr. Anderson is a careful student of such details as ordnance, rigging, shipbuilding, as well as of naval tactics and strategy.

600 pages, illustrated, $7.50

The Ukrainian Revolution: 1917–1920

By JOHN S. RESHETAR, Jr. An analysis of the Ukrainian national movement as it emerged at the time of the Russian Revolution of 1917, when it had its one opportunity to achieve independent statehood by seceding from Russia.

"A truly pioneer work, which throws a clear light on one of the most complicated problems of the evolution of modern Russia and the Soviet Union."—Philip E. Mosely $5.00

Revolutions of 1848

By PRISCILLA ROBERTSON. A vivid reconstruction of what revolution meant to the average citizen in Europe during 1848, and how fateful a part he had in it.

"No one else has seen 1848 quite as Mrs. Robertson sees it, with an ample perspective and a tempered but not disillusioned belief in the democratic ideals which inspired the revolutionists."—N. Y. Times.

"This spirited book, rich in facts though never merely factual, solid but never stolid, will delight those who prefer history when it is as stimulating as fiction."—Geoffrey Bruun, N. Y. Herald Tribune Book Review.

475 pages, Maps, $6.00

Order from your bookstore, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS

Chekhov Publishing House

OF THE EAST EUROPEAN FUND, INC.

The following books in Russian have been printed and are now available:

George Fedotov, The New City, Essays, 384 pp. $2.75

A selection of outstanding essays on civilization, philosophy and literature by a distinguished man who combined a deeply religious spirit with the classic liberal tradition. Professor Fedotov left Soviet Russia in 1925, was a member of the faculty of the Russian theological seminaries in Paris and New York, and died in America in 1950. In him, Russian cultural life in exile lost one of its most erudite, balanced and inspired members.

Nikolai Gogol, St. Petersburg Stories, 272 pp. $2.00

The cycle of Petersburg stories is published in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of a writer whose name is known throughout the world. The volume has a brilliant foreword by Vladimir Nabokov.

Roman Goul, The Horse That Was Red, Novel, 288 pp. $2.00

Taking his title from Revelations, the author, in an autobiographical novel follows "the horse that was red" from a quiet, provincial Russian town, through the excitement of the Revolution, through the confusion of the Civil War, through the concentration camps of Hitler Germany, and to the starting point of the story—this time in the throes of World War II.

Constantine Krypton, The Siege of Leningrad, 256 pp. $2.00

A first-hand account of an important and tragic chapter in the history of World War II. The author, a young scientist, witnessed the siege of Leningrad and the heroic death of hundreds of thousands of its citizens. Now that he is in the United States of America, he is free to give a full account of his experiences and to place the blame where, in his opinion, it rightfully belongs.

Nikolai Leskov, Cathedral Folk, Novel, 400 pp. $2.75

A great Russian classic with the central figure of Father Tuberosov who is the embodiment of a simple nobility of spirit and an eternal love for truth. This book, so rich in spiritual values, was excluded from the recent one-volume Soviet edition of Leskov's works.

Vladimir Nabokov, The Gift, Novel, 416 pp. $3.00

A novel which takes the reader into the creative laboratory of an artist. By giving a portrait of a writer at work on a biography of a public figure, Mr. Nabokov has written an imaginative book on a number of levels. His biography of Gogol and his The Conclusive Evidence have won for him recognition as one of the most brilliant stylists in modern English.

Boris Panteleymonov, The Last Book, Short Stories, 256 pp. $2.00

A collection of short stories by a master of Russian prose whose characterizations and word pictures have made a permanent place for him in modern Russian literature. An engineer by profession, he began to write fairly late in life; his first book appeared in 1947.

Fedor Tyutchev, Selected Poems, 272 pp. $2.00

A large selection of poems by one of the most outstanding figures in Russian letters. A contemporary of Pushkin, Tyutchev received full recognition only toward the end of the 19th century. Many of his poems were set to music by Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninov and Grechaninov. The volume has a special introduction by the poet's grandnephew.

Ariadna Tyrkova-Williams, Ways Toward Freedom, Memoirs, 416 pp. $3.00

A book of memoirs by a novelist and journalist who grew up and was educated in a closely knit country family permeated with the great liberal ideals of the 60's. The author, as a young woman, took an active part in the political life of the 90's and her book is filled with unshakable faith in the rights of the individual.

Eugene Zamiatine, We, Novel, 224 pp. $1.75

The first complete and unabridged appearance in the Russian language of a novel which has all the impact of George Orwell's 1984. Written in 1920, it was translated into a number of languages and showed an amazing insight into the elements of moral decomposition and human degradation inherent in a totalitarian state.

-
- I. Bounine, Life of Arseniev, Novel, First Complete Edition, 388 pp. $2.75
 Ivan Bounine is the only Russian writer ever to win the Nobel Prize. Life of Arseniev is one of his major works and depicts the writer's childhood and youth in surroundings familiar to Lermontov, Turgeniev, Tolstoi, Fet, etc.
- S. Yurasov, Enemy of the People, Novel, 208 pp. $2.00
 Against a background of Soviet administration in the Eastern Zone of Germany the author, a former Major in the Soviet Army, shows the inner conflict arising in the mind of an objective and unselfish individual when he has to make the choice between the ruthless impersonality of a totalitarian state and the universal human impulses. The climax of the novel is reached as the hero makes his dramatic choice to break with the USSR.
- S. Malakhov, The Fliers, A Play, 72 pp. $1.00
 This play gives a dramatic picture of a well-intentioned Westerner who inadvertently almost destroys a man fighting for the very principles which the Western democracies have always espoused. The Fliers has already been accepted by the "New Theatre" for presentation in New York.
- A. Akhmatova, Selected Poems, 272 pp. $2.25
 In this one volume are collected poems from earlier editions as well as some which appeared between 1940 and 1946. Considered as one of the literary lights during the early years of the Soviet regime. Akhmatova suddenly fell in disfavor because she is an individualist and a champion of human dignity. Her wide circle of readers will greet this volume with sympathy and appreciation.
- M. Bulgakov, Selected Stories, 212 pp. $1.75
 One of the outstanding Russian writers of the early Soviet period, Bulgakov was placed on the prohibited list because of his independence of mind. His works are no longer available and constitute a blank in the continuity of the development of Russian writing.
- N. Teffi, The Earthy Rainbow, Short Stories, 285 pp. $2.00
 Together with the author, thousands of Russian people made the unforgettable exodus from Russia after the October Revolution. Each of them—by word, by look, by gesture—left a trace in the creative memory of Teffi which she reflects in these stories.
- J. Jelagin, Taming of the Arts, 434 pp. $3.00
 This is a brilliant survey of the theatrical and musical world under the Soviets during the 30's and early 40's. It introduces numerous important personalities and demonstrates the systematic attempt made by a totalitarian state to harness the creative mind. The book was published in English and received an extraordinarily favorable press but it has never been available in Russian.
- V. Alexeyev, Hidden Russia, 405 pp. $2.75
 Alexeyev is one of the recent escapees from the Soviets. Hidden Russia, in large part autobiographical, is a chronicle of Soviet youth—its first religious and political underground circles. Drawing from his experiences in Soviet concentration camps, the author gives a reader a series of remarkably vivid sketches and impressions of the lives of prisoners.
- M. Koriakov, Liberation of the Soul, 372 pp. $2.75
 This is an impressive autobiography of a man who served as war correspondent with the Red Army in which he held a commission. In a series of interrelated essays, the author shows the process of his own gradual liberation from Soviet ideology and his realization that dictatorship cannot break the spirit of the Russian people. Koriakov shows that a renewed faith in religion and the true spirit of man will prove the doom of totalitarianism in Russia.
- S. Maximov, Taiga, Short Stories, 208 pp. $1.75
 Already recognized as one of the most promising of young D.P. writers, Maximov gives the reader a series of moving sketches drawn from his experiences in Concentration camps in North Russia. Against a background of Taiga, the impenetrable Siberian forest, his characters lead their tortured and torturing lives.

Usual discount to booksellers. These books are available in all Russian bookstores.

CHEKHOV PUBLISHING HOUSE

387 Fourth Avenue

New York 16, N. Y.

New Book . . . (reviewed in this issue)

"The Soviet Financial System"

By MIKHAIL V. CONDOIDE, Ph. D.

Department of Economics, The Ohio State University

A comprehensive analysis of the development and operation of the Soviet financial system, its weaknesses and strength, and its role in the collectivist economy of the Soviet Union.

" . . . the best, simple, direct, factual portrayal of the structure of the Russian economy, its money, banking and credit, and its foreign and domestic policies, which has yet been published."

—J. L. McConnell, Current Economic Comment,
University of Illinois, Vol. 4, No. 2

" . . . a thorough but concise and clear analysis. . . ."

—The American Banker, April 7, 1952

224 Pages

6 x 9

Price, $4.00

Order from your bookstore, or from the publisher:

BUREAU OF BUSINESS RESEARCH
OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY, COLUMBUS, OHIO

HISTORY of RUSSIAN PHILOSOPHY

By N. O. Lossky

The first history of Russian philosophy ever to appear in English.

"The author has witnessed much of the development of philosophy in his country and contributed notably to it himself. His work fills an often felt lacuna. . . ."

"The book should be read by everyone concerned with the fundamental problems of philosophy and interested in the unity of the human mind. Through it one comes to know a mentality different from that one is accustomed to view as typical of the speculative philosopher and one sees an approach presenting novel features."

$10.00

—The Thomist

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITIES PRESS, INC.
227 West 13 Street, New York 11, N. Y.

Send me copies of
HISTORY OF RUSSIAN PHILOSOPHY—$10.00

Check enclosed

Send C.O.D.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

ASEER

CONTRIBUTORS

ARTHUR Z. ARNOLD, Professor of Economics, Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and Washington Square College, New York University

CURT F. BECK, Instructor, Department of Government and International Relations, University of Connecticut

MARTHE BLINOFF, Assistant Professor of Romance Languages, University of Minnesota

G. H. BOLSOVER, Director, School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University of London

MARTHA BRADSHAW, graduate student, Department of English and Comparative Literature, Columbia University

GEORGE B. CRESSEY, Professor of Geography, Syracuse University

ALEXANDER DALLIN, Associate Director, Research Program on the USSR, New York City

RENÉ DAVID, Professor of Comparative Civil Law, University of Paris; author of Manuel Elementaire du Droit Comparee

MALBONE GRAHAM, Professor of Political Science, University of California at Los Angeles

RONALD HILTON, Director, Hispanic American Studies, Stanford University

R. N. CAREW HUNT, author of The Theory and Practice of Communism

JIRI KAŠPAREK, Minister Plenipotentiary at the Czechoslovak Embassy at Moscow, 1946–1948

MANFRED KRIDL, Adam Mickiewicz Professor of Polish Studies, Columbia University

ELENA T. MOGILAT, Lecturer in Russian, Department of Slavic Languages, Columbia University

MARC RAEFF, Assistant Professor of History and Russian Language, Clark University; Visiting Scholar, Far Eastern and Russian Institute, University of Washington, 1952–53

NICHOLAS V. RIASANOVSKY, Assistant Professor of History, State University of Iowa

N. S. TIMASHEFF, Professor of Sociology, Fordham University; author of The Great Retreat and other work on Soviet Russia