Benson of Cowley

Edited by Martin Smith, SSJE

Richard Meux Benson (1824–1915) has been described as ‘one of the greatest spiritual forces in the English Church during the latter part of the nineteenth century’. The writers of these essays – which quote extensively from Benson’s published and unpublished writings – offer them in the belief that his spirituality and thought are deeply relevant to our own ecumenical pilgrimage. £5.50

Philosophies and Cultures

Frederick C. Copleston, SJ

In this book, which contains the Martin D’Arcy Lectures given at Campion Hall, Oxford, in 1978, the author discusses for a general readership aspects of the comparative study of philosophy in various cultures. He includes a wide-ranging discussion of Indian and Chinese thought in general, as well as analyses of more specific themes such as the relation between philosophy and world religions, the psychophysical constitution of human beings, and ideas of history in different cultures. £5.50

Perfect Fools

John Saward

The accusation of folly has frequently been brought against Christians. This book is the first full-length study in English of a much-neglected tradition of Catholic spirituality – the holy fools of Christendom, what have been called by God to appear foolish in the eyes of the world. The story begins with the prophets of the Old Testament and continues to the present day. £9.95

Eusebius as Church Historian

Robert M. Grant

The first and basic history of early Christianity was written by Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea in the early fourth century. Scholars have long been aware that in Books VIII–X one can see Eusebius bringing his political theology up to date as emperors and attitudes change. The present study sets Eusebius in his two contexts, historical and theological, and shows how he developed his picture of the early Church out of his Chronicle and altered it in Books I–VII as well. £10

This book has been skilfully compiled by Michael Bourdillon who is both a professional social anthropologist and a Jesuit priest. It consists mainly of papers delivered at a meeting of social anthropologists and Christian theologians in a conference organised by the Royal Anthropological Institute in 1979. Social anthropological interpretations of sacrifice are first analysed by John Beattie. John Rogerson reviews the place of sacrifice in the Old Testament, and Stephen Sykes contributes a theological paper on sacrifice in Christianity. Two ethnographic papers follow: one by Suzanne Campbell-Jones on how the Mass is actually perceived by groups of nuns, and another by Audrey Hayley on a form of offering peculiar to Assamese Vaishnavism. Extensive linking material is supplied by Michael Bourdillon and Simon Barrington-Ward, and there is a full bibliography. Meyer Fortes, the distinguished Jewish social anthropologist, contributes a preface as co-editor.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. Contributions and books for review should be sent to the Editor, Professor H. D. Lewis, King's College, Strand, London, WC2R 2LS.
2. Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 5,000 and 10,000 words long, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two or more parts may occasionally be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible. They should normally be in English.
3. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere.
4. Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing, preferably on A4 paper, with a wide left-hand margin. The typescript should be prepared to accord as closely as possible with the typographical conventions of the journal.
5. Footnotes should be used sparingly: in general, to give sources of direct quotations, references to main authorities on disputable questions, and evidence relied on for a new or unusual conclusion. They should be numbered in one sequence throughout the article, and should preferably be typed in double spacing at the end of the article.
6. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
7. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where necessary, within ten days of receiving them.
8. Correction should be kept to an absolute minimum. It should be confined to errors of the typist or printer unless the Editor authorises otherwise.
9. All contributors of articles receive 50 free offprints. Reviewers will receive five or more offprints of their reviews.
10. If rejected manuscripts are to be returned, stamps or international coupons should be sent to cover postage, but it would normally be simpler just to retain a copy.
11. Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyrights, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
