

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

MICHELLE D. BONNER is associate professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Victoria. Her current research is on policing, accountability, and the media, with a country focus on Argentina and Chile. She is the author of two books: Protest Policing in Argentina and Chile (forthcoming) and Sustaining Human Rights: Women and Argentine Human Rights Organizations (2007). Her articles on policing in Latin America have appeared in journals including the Journal of Latin American Studies, Bulletin of Latin American Research, and the International Journal of Press/Politics.

CAREW BOULDING is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Colorado Boulder. She received her PhD from the University of California, San Diego, in 2007. She has published articles in Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies, and World Development. Her research interests include political participation, civil society, and nongovernmental organizations.

IGNASI BRUNET ICART es catedrático de sociología por la Universidad Rovira i Virgili, y director del Grupo de Investigación Análisis Social y Organizativo (<http://www.analisisocial.org>). Es autor y coautor de diversos libros, entre ellos: Sociología de las organizaciones (2011), Capitalismo y subjetividad obrera (2011), Empresa y estrategia en la perspectiva de la competencia global (2000), Ciencia, sociedad y economía (2003), Empresa y recursos organizativos (2004), Desarrollo, industria y empresa (2007), Creación de empresas: Innovación e instituciones (2010), y Estrategias de empleo y multinacionales (1999). También es autor y coautor de artículos en revistas especializadas en teoría sociológica, sociología económica, sociología del trabajo y sociología de la educación.

GRAHAM DENYER WILLIS is a PhD candidate in the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is an Open Society Fellow with the Social Sciences Research Council and Open Society Foundations program "Drugs, Security and Democracy"; a visiting researcher with the Fórum Brasileiro de Segurança Pública; and coordinator of the Subsection on Violence and Development of the American Sociological Association. Broadly, his work concerns state formation, violence, and social processes in cities. His work has also been funded by the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada, Foreign Affairs Canada, and the Carroll L. Wilson Society at MIT, among others.

EDWARD F. FISCHER is professor of anthropology and director of the Center for Latin American Studies at Vanderbilt University. His work focuses on issues of political economy, identity politics, and globalization in Guatemala and in Germany. His books include Cultural Logics and Global Economies: Maya Identity in Thought and Practice (2001), Broccoli and Desire: Global Connections and Maya Struggles in Postwar Guatemala (2006, with Peter Benson), and the edited volume Indigenous Peoples, Civil Society, and the Neo-liberal State in Latin America (2008).

R. DOUGLAS HECOCK is an assistant professor of political science and Latin American studies at Bucknell University. He received his MA in Latin American studies and PhD in political science from the University of New Mexico. His research interests include democratization, social policy reform, and the political economy of development.

S. ASHLEY KISTLER is assistant professor of anthropology and Latin American and Caribbean studies at Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida. For ten years she has conducted research on cultural revitalization, historical memory, and power in the Q'eqchi' Maya town of San Juan Chamelco, Guatemala. She has authored articles published in Journal of Latin American and Caribbean Anthropology, Global South, and The Latin Americanist. She currently serves as the book review editor for Collaborative Anthropologies.

BROOKE LARSON teaches history at Stony Brook University. Her books include Cochabamba, 1550–1900: Colonialism and Agrarian Transformation in Bolivia (1998), Trials of Nation Making: Liberalism, Race, and Ethnicity in the Andes, 1810–1910 (2004), and the coedited volume, Ethnicity, Markets, and Migration in the Andes: At the Crossroads of History and Anthropology (1995). Her current book project focuses on the social history of indigenous activism and education in the twentieth-century Bolivian Andes.

SALVADOR MARTÍ I PUIG is a permanent lecturer at the University of Salamanca and member of Barcelona Center for International Affairs (CIDOB). His research focuses on processes of democratization, social movements, and indigenous peoples in Latin America. He is the author of several books, chapters, and articles, most recently The Sandinistas and Nicaragua since 1979 (coedited with David Close and Shelley A. McConnell, 2011), Handbook of Central American Governance (coedited with Diego Sánchez-Ancochea, 2014), and Entre el desarrollo y el buen vivir: Recursos naturales y conflictos en territorios indígenas (with José Aylwin, forthcoming).

DIEGO MATTOS VAZUALDO is an assistant professor of Spanish at Saint Michael's College in Colchester, Vermont. He studied Latin American literature at Universidad Mayor de San Andrés in La Paz, Bolivia. He received his doctorate in Latin American cultures and literatures at the Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio. His current research focuses on the construction of national imaginaries in contemporary Bolivia.

JAMI NELSON-NÚÑEZ is a doctoral student at the University of Colorado, Boulder. Her interests include the study of public goods provision, political behavior, and civil society and nongovernmental organization participation in developing countries. She is currently leading an interdisciplinary team evaluating the provision of drinking water and improved sanitation in rural communities in the Peruvian Amazon.

DANIEL OZAROW is a lecturer in Leadership, Work and Organization at Middlesex University Business School in London, where he also received his PhD. He is co-chair of the Argentina Research Network UK and coeditor of Argentina since the 2001 Crisis: Recovering the Past, Reclaiming the Future (Palgrave Macmillan, 2014). His two most recent journal articles appear in Labor History and cover workers' self-management in Argentina, Britain, Venezuela, and Yugoslavia, and transnational labor opposition to the NATO agreement in North America.

JENNIFER M. PISCOPO is assistant professor of politics at Occidental College. Her research on gender and politics in Latin America has appeared in Politics and Gender, Parliamentary Affairs, Publius: The Journal of Federalism, and Comparative Political Studies. With Mona Lena Krook and Susan Franceschet, she coedited The Impact of Gender Quotas (2012). She received her PhD from the University of California, San Diego, in 2011, where she was a visiting fellow at the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies from 2009 to 2010. A Gates Cambridge Scholar, she received her M.Phil. in Latin American Studies with distinction from the University of Cambridge in 2003. She held a faculty position at Salem College in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, from 2011 to 2013.

ALEJANDRO PIZZI es doctor y profesor de sociología en la Universidad Rovira i Virgili, y miembro del Grupo de Investigación Análisis Social y Organizativo (<http://www.analisisocial.org>). Sus principales líneas de investigación son sociología del trabajo y sociología económica. Es autor del libro Capitalismo y subjetividad obrera (2011) y coautor de varios capítulos de libros. Asimismo, publicó resultados de diversas investigaciones empíricas sobre temas vinculados a la sociología del trabajo y la sociología económica en revistas como Revista de Estudios Sociales (Colombia); Sociedade e Cultura: Revista de Pesquisas e Debates em Ciências Sociais (Brasil); Sociología del Trabajo (España); Papeles del CEIC (España) y Cuadernos de Relaciones Laborales (España), entre otras.

ANNA POPOVITCH is a visiting scholar at Escuela Nacional de Estudios Superiores, Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (UNAM, Morelia). Her recent publications include "Debating Latin American Aesthetic Theory: Beatriz Sarlo on the Autonomy of Art" (2011); "From 'Ideology' to 'Structure of Feeling': Raymond Williams on Culture and Society," forthcoming in Multiple Experiences and Imaginaries of Modernity (edited by Oliver Kozlarek); and, with Miguel Ángel Urrego Ardila, the forthcoming coedited volume Althusser en América Latina. Popovitch's research interests include sociocultural criticism (in particular, theories of ideology and subject formation), intellectual history (in particular, twentieth-century left-wing movements in Latin America), and gender studies.

RENÉ J. SILVA is a PhD candidate in the Atlantic history program at Florida International University in Miami. His dissertation focuses on the reintegration of the Loyalists in the United States after the American Revolution. Other areas of scholarly interest include questions of comparative fidelity in British and Spanish America in the era of independence; issues of loyalty, race, trade, and political transition in East Florida during the Second Spanish Period (1784–1821); and Cuban society in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.

EDUARDO MUNHOZ SVARTMAN holds a PhD in political science and is associate professor of the Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul. His most recent publications include the organization of the book Defesa, segurança internacional e forças ar- madras (2012), the article “Brazil–United States Military Relations during the Cold War: Political Dynamic and Arms Transfers” (2011), and the chapter “Em face aos amigos do norte: Experiências e relatos de oficiais brasileiros sobre os EUA (1942–1950)” (In Estado e desenvolvimento: Política e relações internacionais no Brasil contemporâneo, 2010). His areas of research interest are Brazilian foreign policy during the Cold War, Brazil-US military relations, and the history of international relations.

VÍCTOR M. URIBE-URAN is associate professor of history and law at Florida International University in Miami. The author of numerous publications on lawyers, constitutional law, and society during the Age of Revolution in Spanish America, he is currently finishing a comparative book on the history of domestic violence and the law in Colombia, Mexico, and Spain in that same period.

BART VICTOR is the Cal Turner Professor of Moral Leadership across the Professions at the Owen Graduate School of Management, Vanderbilt University. He joined the Owen faculty from the Institute for Management Development International in Lausanne, Switzerland. His research interests include the practical and moral dimensions of enterprise approaches to the alleviation of poverty, and the ethical foundations of business.