Lived Religion in America

Toward a History of Practice

Edited by David D. Hall

The essays in this volume invite the reader to think of religion dynamically, reconsidering American religious history in terms of practices that are linked to their social contexts. The point of departure is the concept of "lived religion." Discussing such topics as gift exchange, cremation, hymn-singing, and women's spirituality, a group of leading sociologists and historians of religion explores the many facets of how people carry out their religious beliefs on a daily basis.

The Science of Sacrifice

American Literature and Modern Social Theory

Susan L. Mizruchi

The practice and rhetoric of sacrifice has a special centrality in modern American literature. In a compelling interdisciplinary investigation, Susan Mizruchi portrays an episode in American cultural history when the literary movement of realism and the fledgling field of sociology both converged in the belief that sacrifice is basic to sociality.

"The Science of Sacrifice is an extremely impressive exploration in intellectual and cultural history. . . . [Mizruchi's]. . . insights are extremely illuminating and frequently brilliant."—Orlando Patterson

Poor Richard's Principle

Recovering the American Dream through the Moral Dimension of Work, Business, and Money

Robert Wuthnow

"Wuthnow reconsiders the nature and meaning of the American dream in the late twentieth century. . . . [He] perceives a moral vacuum at the core of American society, and recommends that Americans systematically revisit the cultural imperatives of an earlier age to reinvent the paradigm of personal success in late capitalism. An important and timely work."—The Virginia Quarterly Review

Insider/Outsider

American Jews and Multiculturalism

Edited by David Biale, Michael Galchinsky, and Susannah Heschel

"I am 100% American,' my father, born in Boston to immigrant parents, used to declare proudly. But he lived his whole life with an intense sense of difference from the surrounding gentile community. The essays brought together in Insider/Outsider trenchantly analyze this paradox, exploring its historical origins and pondering its implications for the future. Insider/Outsider provides insight into the situation not only of American Jews but also of all hyphenated American identities."—Stephen Greenblatt

Journal of Religious History

Edited by Hilary M. Carey

The Journal of Religious History is the most comprehensive journal of its kind. With high quality international contributors, the journal covers a uniquely broad range of topics in religious history encompassing a variety of geographical areas and a wide range of cultures and historical periods.

The Religious History Association will be establishing a new scholarly society to support the practice of Religious History called the Religious History Society. It will be launched at the biennial conference of the Australian Historical Association, 5 - 10 July 1998, University of Sydney.

<http://www.newcastle.edu.au/departement/hi/mill/millennium>

Select papers from the conference will appear in a special millennial issue of the Journal of Religious History to appear in the year 2000.
