FOOD POISONING

G. M. DACK, Ph.D., M.D.

This book was first published in 1943. The REVISED EDITION now issued gives the most recent information (in particular the results of war-time research) about the agents which may cause food poisoning. The agents discussed are: chemicals, poisonous plants and animals, bacteria and their products, viruses, protozoans, helminths, and a miscellaneous group of illnesses the causes of which are not known. Dr Dack is Professor of Bacteriology and Director of the Food Research Institute in the University of Chicago. 21s. net
