GENEVA-AFRICA

THE JOURNAL OF THE GENEVA-AFRICA INSTITUTE

Africa in time past lent the European imagination that touch of exotic adventure which its own milieu did not always provide. That time is no more. Africa today seeks her own way through difficulties and incertitudes to which no one open to her desire to meet on terms of equality can remain indifferent.

It is the wish of Geneva-Africa to be an active partner in this unconditional dialogue, and to contribute to a deeper comprehension of the problems and opportunities facing an emergent Africa.

SEVEN AREA HISTORIES

TANZANIA BEFORE 1900

Andrew Roberts (editor)

This exciting book brilliantly gives the lie to the old myth that Africa either had no history or that it was more or less static, or at best repetitive. The contributors to this volume give a general survey of the pre-colonial history of a group of people in Tanzania among whom they have themselves lived and worked. Their studies reveal a continuous process of social and political innovation, economic improvement and technological change. Far from being chained to unchanging custom the societies of Tanzania were finding new ways to extend the range of social organization and increase their mastery of what was all too commonly a harsh and treacherous environment.

Economic Integration In Africa

PETER ROBSON

Includes a mass of information not available elsewhere, and will be of great value to those concerned with integration schemes in Africa and the less developed areas generally. It is also an important contribution to development economics.

'This is a refreshing book, because it is unusual in these days to find an economist applying the tools of economic analysis to the problems of Africa without bias of -ologies and -isms. Mr Robson has a readable style. He is very well informed and has taken a great deal of trouble about his facts.'

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
