

The Journal of the Australian Institute of Agricultural Science

Edited by
JOHN J. LENAGHAN, B.Agr.Sc., M.Sc.

Since 1935 The Journal of the Australian Institute of Agricultural Science has provided a forum for the multitude of disciplines comprising agricultural science. Many of the ideas and methods that have contributed to making Australian agriculture pre-eminent in so many ways were first described in its pages.

While Australia now has specialist journals serving professional agriculture, the JAIAS still has by far the largest audience because of its catholic content, its professional editorial supervision, and the renown of its contributing authors. Nowadays it has left publication of major research reports to the specialist journals but it still publishes numerous short communications in its Technical Notes section. Each quarterly issue contains several full length review papers and the Forum section offers both shorter and longer papers on a wide range of topics reflecting the forward thinking of leading agricultural scientists. Other regular features include sections devoted to the description of new cultivars, summaries of postgraduate degree theses, book reviews and letters. The societal rôle of the Journal has been restricted to reporting major awards to the Institute's members and obituary notices.

All contributions of a technical or scientific nature are refereed and standards are guarded by an Honorary Editorial Advisory Board consisting of a score of Australia's more distinguished scientists who represent the main disciplines involved in agriculture. In order to be accepted for publication, papers must not only attain high scientific standards, but also be relevant to Australian agriculture in the widest sense of that term.
