Welcome to My Psychosis.
Figgy Fox (b. 1959).

Figgy Fox's artwork is his reaction to admissions to psychiatric hospitals and his battle against addiction to drugs and alcohol and episodes of depression and psychosis. He paints 'when the dark thoughts of my illness invade my mind and it then becomes a necessity to put the ideas onto paper in a bid to exorcise my mind'. The paintings draw on his innermost feelings, phobias and paranoia that form recurrent symbols in his work such as moths and scissors, of which he has a strong phobia. His more recent work depicts the isolation and loneliness he has felt following his separation from his second wife and the deaths of close friends.
