Bernard Shaw on the London Art Scene, 1885-1950

Stanley Weintraub, Editor

Shaw's brilliant art criticism over sixty years traces the development of important artists from Millais and Whistler to Epstein, offers uniquely penetrating observations on eminent paintings, and concentrates especially on the interconnection between art and society. 496 pp. $50.00

The Duplicating Imagination: Twain and the Twain Papers

Maria Ornella Marotti

Examining the posthumous works so far published in the Mark Twain Papers series, Marotti advances with success the finding, novel in Twain scholarship, that Mark Twain really was experimenting with aspects of fiction ordinarily thought of today as modern or postmodern. 220 pp. $24.95

Ganelon, Treason, and the Chanson de Roland

Emanuel J. Mickel

Probing the question of Ganelon's treason and trial within the context of medieval law and the epic poem, a distinguished scholar ranges beyond the confines of the poem to discuss such broad subjects as the nature of the duel, medieval proofs, and the nature and punishment of treason. 176 pp. $22.50

Madness and Blake's Myth

Paul Youngquist

In its thematic content and dramatic method, Paul Youngquist argues, Blake's myth is about madness. Drawing upon recent clinical and philosophical inquiries, Youngquist shows how Blake makes poetry out of mental suffering; madness comes to operate in his myth as a metaphor for the Fall. 224 pp. $24.95

Para/Worlds: Entanglements of Art and History

These essays, engaging topics from Anacreon and Horace to Kafka and Samuel Beckett, are concerned with the notion of Art and Life as "para-worlds," or fields of being that elucidate and complete each other, confront and contradict each other. 304 pp. $28.50

Selected Letters of William Michael Rossetti

Roger W. Peattie, Editor

This edition of more than six hundred of Rossetti's letters to leading literary and artistic figures of his day (Browning, Swinburne, Whistler, Whitman, etc.) shows the range and quality of Rossetti's friendships, his active involvement in the cultural life of Victorian England, and the complexity of his character. 304 pp. $49.50

Sidney and Spenser: The Poet as Maker

S. K. Heninger, Jr.

With Sidney and Spenser, English poetry assimilated the principles of Aristotelian mimesis and devised a poetics that becomes a depictive art, an activity that produces images both aural and visual, allying it to music and painting; writing is making. 660 pp. $60.00

White Lies

Melville's Narratives of Facts

By JOHN SAMSON. Samson offers full contextual readings of Melville's five major narratives of facts—Typee, Omoo, Redburn, White-Jacket, and Israel Potter. He demonstrates that in these novels Melville critically rewrote the sources on which he drew, in effect making the genre itself a subject of his writing. $28.95

Dionysus Reborn

Play and the Aesthetic Dimension in Modern Philosophical and Scientific Discourse

By MIHAI I. SPARIOSU. Spariosu explores the significance of the closely linked concepts of play and aestheticism in philosophical and scientific discourse since the end of the eighteenth century. Spariosu points out that since its birth in archaic and classical Hellenic thought the concept of play has always been subject to the influences of various rational and prerational sets of values. $36.50

The Victorian Self

Autobiography and Biblical Narrative

By HEATHER HENDERSON. Henderson examines how three representative Victorian autobiographers—John Henry Newman, John Ruskin, and Edmund Gosse—adapted and even subverted typological narrative models in order to tell their stories of doubt and un-conversion. $24.95

Renaissance Culture in Poland

The Rise of Humanism, 1470–1543

By HAROLD B. SEGEL. This is the first book-length account of Renaissance humanism in 15th- and 16th-century Poland. Segel demonstrates that a lively community of intellectuals—Copernicus among them—helped to bring Poland into the mainstream of contemporary European culture and to lay the foundations for the Polish High Renaissance of the second half of the sixteenth century. $34.50

Metamorphoses of Helen

Authority, Difference, and the Epic

By MIHOKO SUZUKI. Through readings of Homer, Virgil, Spenser, and Shakespeare, Suzuki shows how the epic—traditionally a masculine genre—depends on the representation of woman as a crucial locus for male poets' assertion of difference from their predecessors. $32.50

Authorizing Words

Speech, Writing, and Print in the English Renaissance

By MARTIN ELSKY. Elsky here illuminates the complex interplay of linguistic theory and textual representation in English Renaissance writing. Focusing on texts by such authors as Herbert, Bacon, Burton, and Jonson, Elsky discusses the impact of speech-oriented and writing-dominated theories of language on textual practice. $29.95

Decadent Genealogies

The Rhetoric of Sickness from Baudelaire to D'Annunzio

By BARBARA SPACKMAN. Spackman here examines the ways in which decadent writers adopted the language of physiological illness and change as a figure for psychic otherness. She shows how the rhetoric of sickness provided the male decadent writer with a rationale for the occupation and appropriation of the female body. $26.95

Transfigured World

Walter Pater's Aesthetic Historicism

By CAROLYN WILLIAMS. Williams challenges traditional approaches to Pater's writings and shows precise ways in which the form of his prose expresses its content. She asserts that Pater's aestheticism and his historicism should be understood as dialectically interrelated critical strategies, inextricable from each other in practice. $35.00

The Remasculinization of America

Gender and the Vietnam War

By Susan Jeffords

"Jeffords's brilliant feminist reading of American responses to the Vietnam War helps us understand the complicity of everyday attitudes toward gender and our ideas of war in the postindustrial age."

—John Carlos Rowe

Jeffords argues that the crisis of Vietnam demonstrates better than other social and cultural upheavals the pervasiveness of patriarchal values in U.S. culture.

The Mother/Daughter Plot

Narrative, Psychoanalysis, Feminism

By Marianne Hirsch

Mothers and daughters—the female figures neglected by classic psychoanalysis and submerged in traditional narrative—are at the center of this book. Confronting psychoanalytic theories of subject-formation with narrative theories, Hirsch traces the emergence and transformation of female family romance patterns from Jane Austen to Toni Morrison and Marguerite Duras.

Black Female Playwrights

An Anthology of Plays before 1950

Edited with an Introduction by Kathy A. Perkins

"Highly recommended."

—Library Journal

The need to acknowledge these works was the impetus behind this volume. Perkins has selected nineteen plays from seven writers who were among the major dramatizers of the black experience during this early period. As forerunners to the activist black theater of the 1950s and 1960s, these plays represent a critical stage in the development of black drama in the United States.

Selves at Risk

Patterns of Quest in Contemporary American Letters

Ihab Hassan

ISBN 0-299-12370-7

Cloth $22.95t

"Selves at Risk is a beautifully articulated tribute to risk-taking in the world and, no less, in writing, testimony in either case to the venturesomeness of the human will. By one of the most courageous and resourceful interpreters of contemporary culture, Ihab Hassan's new book is a rejuvenation of criticism at a time when it has become sickened nearly to death by the various schools of resentment."

—Richard Poirier
Rutgers University

"Ihab Hassan directs himself straight and hard—though with a rhetorical flair—to those postwar American writers who are still open, or rather are newly open, to exposing the self to spiritually risky adventure. This book is an impressive and wide-ranging survey of contemporary authors of first-person narratives. . . ."

Cary Nelson

ISBN 0-299-12340-5

Cloth $24.95t

"Cary Nelson's study of American poetry in the first four decades of our century is revisionist history at its most provocative and challenging."

—Marjorie Perloff
Stanford University

"Nelson's book will make it impossible for anyone to think about either 'modern American poetry' or 'literary history' in quite the same way as before."

—Andrew Ross
Princeton University

Cary Nelson retrieves the work of dozens of forgotten poets—especially women, blacks, and writers on the left—and offers a detailed rereading of a diverse and volatile period in American literature. He argues that "we no longer know the history of poetry of the first half of this century, and most of us do not know that the knowledge is gone."

Said reviewers of the 1980 edition

The State of the Language 1990 Edition

Edited by CHRISTOPHER RICKS and LEONARD MICHAELS

"Sprawling, uncoordinated, uneven, noisy, and appealing," wrote one reviewer of the first edition of this book, published on 1 January 1980.

Exactly a decade later, here is the book anew, with the same editors but with fifty fresh contributors writing essays and poems that engage our language today.

Imaginative attention is bestowed on the changes of recent years, changes not only in the language but in how language is understood. In the forefront are the relations between British English, American English, and those other Englishes with which they compete or cooperate.

The nervous negotiations of gender and feminism. The darkness of AIDS. The bright flicker of the computer. The old smolderings of "standard English" and correctness. The "bad language" that has lately done so well in our society. How all this has been politicized—or is it rather that its inevitably political nature has only now been recognized?

A Matter of Passion

Letters of Bernard Berenson and Clotilde Margheri

Edited by DARIO BIOCCA

"A fascinating self-revealing and self-concealing account of aspects of both correspondents, so alike in their cultured, narcissistic sensitivity, and so dramatically and amusingly different in other ways, she so young and bien rangeé and ambitious for experience, he so experienced, analytical and insatiable for youth and beauty. The letters show a side of Berenson generally known but never so clearly documented."

The Collected Works of Abraham Cowley, Volume 1

Edited by Thomas O. Calhoun, Laurence Heyworth, and Allan Pritchard

The present volume, first in a series of six, contains Poetical Blossomes, Sylva, The Puritan's Lecture, The Puritan and the Papist, and The Civil War, thus representing Cowley's juvenilia and political poems from 1633 to 1643. This is the first edition to print these poems with comprehensive textual and critical commentaries and notes.

Other volumes will contain Cowley's dramatic and prose works, translations, poetic works in English and Latin, early baroque musical settings of many of the poems, as well as the letters and biographies of this prolific and versatile writer. William B. Hunter and Ernest W. Sullivan, along with the editors of this volume, serve as general editors of The Collected Works.

Reading the New Testament

P A T R I C K G R A N T

By presenting problems of religious belief imaginatively, the New Testament brings home to us the full challenge of faith. Yet, however much enriched by narrative and symbol, myth and image, the New Testament in the final analysis is intolerant of the fictive imagination, for it asks us to believe that the crucified Jesus is God. In this book, Patrick Grant examines how we are led through the literature to the extra-literary in several New Testament books.

Prompted in part by a rapprochement between recent literary criticism and biblical scholarship, Grant's literary approach to the Scriptures is both fruitful and of timely interest.

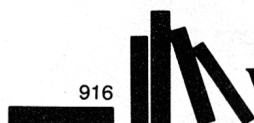

"Patrick Grant brings to his reading of the New Testament a mind and a sensibility trained, to an exceptional degree, in both literature and philosophical theology. . . . He is capable of organizing the complex resources of his mind in the service of a powerful idea: that innocent suffering, so far from refuting Christianity, is in fact central to any real understanding of it. It is, after all, the faith whose sign is the cross. Patrick Grant understands this better than almost any writer I have read."

States of Estrangement:
The Novels of D. H. Lawrence, 1912-1917

by Wayne Templeton

This book analyzes a selection of Lawrence's novels, investigating the correlation between urban industrialism and the failure of individuals, particularly women, to achieve personal fulfillment and autonomy. Templeton establishes the socio-historical context in which these novels were written, and discusses alienation (a pervasive phenomenon within the novels), which he sees as engendering two basic varieties or states of estrangement: social alienation and personal or psychological estrangement. His study attempts, as well, to discuss and to determine the plausibility of those alternatives Lawrence offers as solutions to the problems of estrangement, aborted relationships and repression, alternatives which become an integral and important part of his novels.

by Kathleen McCullough

Concrete poetry is principally an alinear experimental form that arose in the 1950s and continues into the 1980s. For the purposes of this book, the rubric "concrete" includes visual and sound poetry as well. This bibliography collects and annotates the monographic writing about the poetry and locates the poems and poets in books, as well as independent publications of the poems, published from 1955 through 1985. Entries, representing nineteen languages, also identify pertinent book chapters, essays, and papers. The bibliography is indexed by subject, book title, poem title, language, and publication date. An introduction and two appendices help to make this volume a valuable resource.

Rhythm and Writing

by Robert S. Oschsner

Rhythm, whether in speech or prose, controls the way a text is physically generated and the way it is psychologically perceived. Because speech and prose share the same basic linguistic properties, their rhythms can be measured accurately to show different stages of language development. In effect, Oschsner's study of rhythm opens all language to the same fundamental measure, and from this measure emerges a new understanding of the relationships between literacy, literature, and the ability to write well.

Filling the gap in African American literary history

Black Literature, 1827-1940, edited by Henry Louis Gates, Jr., Director of The Black Periodical Fiction Project, captures and indexes thousands of discreet works of fiction, poetry and literary criticism from local Black newspapers and periodicals.

Here is an archaeology of creative expression revealing the fiction, poetry, and reviews of hundreds of authors left out of the publishing mainstream. Exposed, at last, is the true depth and richness of the Black literary tradition.

Computational Linguistics Computerlinguistik

An International Handbook on Computer Oriented Language Research and Applications
Ein internationales Handbuch zur computergestützten Sprachforschung und ihrer Anwendungen

Edited by István S. Bátori, Winfried Lenders, and Wolfgang Putschke

1989. xxxiv + 933 pages. 8 folded maps. ISBN 3-11-009792-3. Cloth $442.00

(Handbücher zur Sprach- und Kommunikationswissenschaft, Band 4 / Handbooks of Linguistics and Communication Science, Volume 4)

The last 30 years have witnessed the emergence and growth of the discipline Computational Linguistics. This field, which is also known as linguistic data processing, language data processing, natural language processing, and information linguistics, reflects the interests of many different disciplines ranging from philology, linguistics, computer and information science, psychology, and psycholinguistics.

Despite this diversity, the discipline does have a clearly definable subject matter: the investigation of language and language phenomena by using the computer as a research tool. The Handbook aims to structure this relatively young discipline and to give as comprehensive a review as possible of its foundations, findings, and perspectives. The Handbook reflects the main binary division within the field of Computational Linguistics: (1) the computer as a tool for describing linguistic phenomena and processing the empirical data on which linguistic theories are based and; (2) the computer as a language user, as an artificially "intelligent" system that can thus be regarded as a simulation of natural language processing systems. By considering both description and simulation side by side, the Handbook presents this new discipline in its entirety and thus provides an orientation for individual researchers, teachers, and students in the field.

A bibliography of approximately 4,000 titles which are referred to in the articles completes the volume.

Sponsored by "The Lacan Seminar in English" with the kind participation of French psychoanalysts and University professors.

Taught in English, the Seminar will focus on specific concepts presented in Seminar 11: the gaze, anamorphosis, the drive, transference, and others. To encourage institutional funding, we will sponsor a two-day conference on Lacan (June 16–17) that will enable participants to present papers on some aspect of Lacanian psychoanalysis.

Following the Seminar, participants will have the opportunity to attend the VI^e Internationale Rencontre (July 6–9), which will focus on "Traits de Perversion." (Simultaneous translations will be offered in English, Spanish, French, and Portuguese.)

Tuition:	Students	$300 (by February 1, 1990) $400 (February 2–June 1, 1990)

Inside Poetry Out

An Introduction to Poetry

Centers discussion and explications on five complete poems to develop skills of poetic analysis.

John O. Hayden

PROFESSOR
JOHN O. HAYDEN
University of California

A highly original approach: rather than introducing bits and pieces of disparate works as he goes along, the author immerses the student in just five poems, all major works, which are explicated in their entirety. Thus, Inside Poetry Out has a unity and focus lacking in all poetry texts.

“A poem asks immediately for attention. It demands that you spend some time and thought if you wish to appreciate it fully. And intelligent reading and discussion of poetry require some knowledge of how it works, what to expect, and what terms to use in talking about it.

“To provide such knowledge is what this book is all about.”

South African Tales

Advance, Retreat

Selected Short Stories By Richard Rive

"The twelve stories collected here confirm that the silencing of [this] distinctive voice is a deplorable loss."
— Publisher's Weekly

Richard Rive, distinguished black South African writer, was found stabbed to death in his home in June, 1989. This volume comprises the best of his works. One of South Africa's most celebrated artists, Cecil Skotnes, has provided strong woodcuts to illustrate the stories.

BLACK WOMEN WRITING AUTOBIOGRAPHY

A TRADITION
WITHIN A TRADITION

Joanne M. Braxton

From slave narratives to the modern autobiography, Braxton explores the process of black women finding a public voice in America. She examines "sass" as a mode of women's discourse and introduces the outraged mother as a parallel to the hero archetype.

"[Braxton] has been creative in finding resources and courageous in analyzing and interpreting her finds. This is the work of a diligent mind. The material is mountainous, yet the book sings. Braxton is a poet."—Maya Angelou

"Rich in empathy and insight, Braxton's trailblazing study attends to both the textual and historical dimensions of a powerful literary inheritance... Braxton doesn't just read—she listens."—Henry Louis Gates, Jr., National Humanities Center

RACE, GENDER, AND DESIRE

NARRATIVE STRATEGIES IN
THE FICTION OF TONI CADE
BAMBARA, TONI MORRISON,
AND ALICE WALKER

Elliott Butler-Evans

Butler-Evans explores the manner in which the often contending "desires" of race and gender determine the narrative structures in the work of Bambara, Morrison, and Walker, causing a sort of "narrative violence." Butler-Evans finds a progression from the 1970s to the 1980s, when the authors' use of a post-modern narrative technique enables the ideologies of race and gender to converge more successfully.

"Everywhere sensitive to the nuances of textual disruptions, to subtle shifts of point of view, and to rhetorical dissonance... An influential contribution to one of the most exciting new areas of literary study."—Valerie Smith, Princeton University
